All Star IF-IM coaches announced

Year's leading mentors named to head squads

By Jim Wangersheim

Announcement of the selection of the coaches for the first annual Technology News Intramural-Interfraternity All Star Basketball game was made public today. The mentors were chosen for Technology News by Commissioners Ed Glancy and Lawrence Shapiro of the respective leagues.

Picked to lead the fraternity All Stars were Sherman Roberts, coach of Sigma Alpha Mu, Roger Krafft, of Alpha Sigma Phi, and Lou Feckner, head man of the Delta Tau Delta quintet.

Leo Kiley, coach of the Wolves, Charles Fuhry, chief worrier for the Trojans, and Paul Peterson of the Archs were named by Commissioner Glancy to direct the intramural squad.

When reached at his home, Coach Roberts of the third place "Sammies," was quite pleased with the honor.

"I want to say now, that along with Coaches Krafft and Feckner, I can promise we will do our best to make this game a success. I am honored at being selected."

Before suffering their second defeat against seven wins at the hands of the Alpha Sigs, earlier this week, Coach Roberts' Sammies were pressing the front running Theta Xi for the league lead.

It was the Alpha Sigs, led by lanky Coach Roger Krafft, who finished with a powerful second half to defeat the "Sammies" and climb into second place.

Theta Xi, the team that, apparently coaches itself, did not place a coach on the list.

Lou Feckner, the Delt mentor, is suffering along with his club through one of their worst years. Considering his lack of material, Feckner has done well to linger close to the .500 mark.

In the Intramural league, both Coaches Leo Kiley of the Wolves and Charlie Fuhry of the Trojans have come down the wire to the final playoff with an unblemished record. Both have tucked six victories under their belt. The Archs, led by Coach Paul Peterson, boast a five won, one lost record; the defeat coming from Peterson's comentor Kiley's Wolves.

Coach Kiley's Wolves are slight favorites to repeat as league champions, though the undefeated Trojans under the tutorship of Fuhry are not conceding an inch.

The coaches will be handed their teams Friday, March 4, when they are introduced to the public through Technology News.

Tech Relays date set

Out of a triangular meet between Armour Tech, Northwestern university, and the University of Chicago in '28, the Illinois Tech Relay Games have grown to be the world's largest indoor invitational track meet. John J. Schommer, IIT athletic director and A. A. Stagg Jr., former Techhawk track coach, turned the meet into the present form in which it will appear Saturday, March 12, at the University of Chicago fieldhouse.

The eighteenth annual Tech Relays are already drawing entries from the universities, colleges and junior colleges of the Midwest. With five universities, two colleges and two junior colleges already having their entries in the hands of Director Schommer, the games again will rival the record-smashing meetings of the past.

Led by those perennial Indiana track rivals, Purdue, Notre Dame and Indiana, the university roster also includes Marquette and Kansas State to shape into a fast field.

Ohio Wesleyan will again send ace miler Quentin Brelsford, and a distance medley team to defend the laurels won last year in the college division. Opposing them will be Indiana State Teachers. On the local scene, Morton and Thornton Junior colleges have entered strong teams.

Pre-meet dopesters are already marking Rollin Prather, husky shot-putter from Kansas State, and Roy Potochnick, co-holder of the pole-vault title, as men to watch. With the bowing out of Olympic stars Harrison Dillard and Bill Porter from the collegiate scene, the hurdles will be wide open in both divisions.

Chess tournament open to all techmen

Illinois Tech's Chess team gained second place in the City Rapid Chess tourney, finishing behind the Austin Chess club, who they defeated in a later match.

The team had three matches between semesters, beating the Austin Chess club, drawing with the Hyde Park club, and losing to the University of Chicago.

The Chess club's annual school championship tournament provides an opportunity for proficient pawn pushers to meet top-flight competition. Entrance for this year's tourney closes next Friday. All interested students should sign up at the South Union bulletin board.
