Plans for a school-wide photo contest to be held in connection with Junior Week were formulated at a meeting of the executive committee of Armour Eye Monday. A special committee was appointed to work out the details of the awards, the identity of the judges, and the rules of the competition within the next two weeks.

The executive committee has also announced that a comprehensive program of instruction on a personal basis is being organized for members wishing to further their knowledge of the field.

Members of Armour Eye are to make a field trip to the Municipal airport March 13. Arrangements are being made with airport officials for a conducted tour of the facilities at the field.

Also scheduled for "Eye" members is another "Studio Night" to be held March 25. A professional model will be present, and the entire evening will be devoted to taking pictures. The next regular meeting of Armour Eye is to be held in the club's quarters on the fourth floor of Chapin Tuesday at 1 p.m.

Dangerfield talks on foreign policy

Foreign and domestic policy have been so closely allied since the beginning of World War II that it is no longer possible to distinguish between them.

Royden Dangerfield, professor of political science at the University of Wisconsin, made that statement last Friday in a speech presented before a special meeting of IIT students.

The lecture, entitled "How Foreign Policy Is Made," was the second in a series of civic education lectures sponsored by the National Foundation for Education in American Citizenship.

Dr. Dangerfield traced the history of foreign policy from its early minor role in government affairs.

Vote nears for "pair of year"

Every Techawk on Illinois Tech's campus will have the opportunity of taking part in Junior Week-Open House activities by voting for the Man and Woman of the Year.

The office of the dean of students is compiling a list of all students eligible for this contest. This list will be published in Technology News before the election and all people whose names do not appear on it will have the right to request that they be added.

Men and women in their senior year who have been active in campus organizations, publications and class offices, are being considered by the dean's office.

The election commission of ITSA, headed by Jim Wangersheim, and Bob Shuldes will conduct the election.
