News in Brief

A special meeting of the Co-op club has been scheduled for Thursday to arrange for pre-registration and registration for working periods of the cooperative students. Harold L. Minkler, director of placement and faculty adviser of the club, has issued a warning that co-ops must attend this meeting or be in danger of being dropped from school.

Seniors should return their proofs to DuBois Studio immediately, as the engraving deadline is approaching.

The Integral staff reports that although a very satisfactory percentage of seniors have had their individual yearbook portraits taken, only one-fourth of these seniors have their "glossies" in the Integral files. Proofs have not been returned to have the prints processed.

Lost and found found again—sale Tuesday

Somebody lost the lost and found. This was the situation that confronted the Student Union committee when they attempted to procure the articles scheduled to be auctioned last Friday. Upon consulting the business and maintenance offices, they were unable to discover the whereabouts of the missing boxes.

Finally, after much sleuthing, they were discovered under the rafters in the North Union and the lost and found was found once more. The long awaited auction is slated to take place Tuesday, at 1:30 p.m. in the South Union, with commissioner Cliff Nelsen wielding the gavel.

Student directory sale date nears

November 29 has been set as the sales date of the 1949 Illinois Tech Student Directory. As only 2500 copies have been ordered, they will be sold on a first-come-first-served basis.

Directory Editor Cliff Mock explained that the number of copies was purposely limited to enable the book to be sold for twenty cents. Printing of additional copies would raise the price 25 per cent.

Mock originally planned the publication date three weeks earlier. It was delayed by lack of response of the Technology Center personnel office in submitting information for their section of the book.

The new Directory has a much-advertised feature in its plastic spiral binding, permitting it to remain open at any designated spot. Trying to dial a phone number with one hand while holding the old book open with the other hand was pretty tricky. The stiff binding often snapped the book shut at a crucial moment, and the page and the phone number were lost.

In addition, the staff believes that the new book will be more accurate in every detail than last year's pioneer. Material in every section was carefully checked and proofread before printing.

Zest seeks writer's art

There are only 11 days left for Techawk literary giants to submit their works to Zest for publication. As anticipated by Hal Leler and Alan Plait, co-editors, more poems than short stories are being entered. Students are reminded that short stories of any length are acceptable.

Manuscripts must be placed in an envelope, together with the name, address and telephone number of the writer and submitted to the secretary of the LLP department. Completed copies will be distributed after the Christmas holiday for ten cents a copy.
