PHOTONASTIC is a concept addressing the invention, design, production and potential implementation of a multi-functional building integrated system. The system attempts to dramatically address the relationship between energy conservation and architectural facade innovation. The skin affects both the appearance and performance in such a way that these diverse essential features promote new design concepts and stimulate technical developments for the architecture of the future.