What's your angle?

An ethical discussion on current topics

By Annie Hutches & Phil Theisen
TECHNEWS WRITERS

"Hey, Nancy, did you hear about that new resolution passed by City Council?"

"No. I haven't, Pete. What is it exactly?"

"Well, the resolution is supposed to prevent the federal government from deporting immigrants who have relatives that are currently citizens or are in the process of becoming citizens. This is helping immigrants, who have come over to the United States, stay with their families."

"Well, Pete, I do not agree entirely with this decision. Regardless of what citizenship your family has, immigration is a problem. If immigrants come over and have relatives over here, it is simply giving them an excuse to immigrate and giving the authorities an excuse to not take action. This will lead to a large increase in our country's population and a shortage in our resources. They do not pay taxes and therefore, they are depriving us of our food, health care, jobs, and education."

"I see your point, but in many cases, these immigrants take the low paid jobs that most Americans don't want. Also, if they were legalized and started paying taxes, it would create more resources for our country. As for education, if we send back those that were educated here, they take the knowledge given to them and return to their homeland and improve the well being of that country. Why not allow all that talent to stay here? Further, I think the amount of resources poured into border control now could be used in many better ways to improve the lives of the people here."

"But what about the effect they have on our American society?"

"What about it?"

"Immigrants fail to incorporate themselves into our society. They replace the local culture with their own culture and some refuse to learn our language. The United States is supposed to be the Great Melting Pot, but this is being changed, because they segregate themselves into their own communities."

"Is the United States not the land of opportunity? We are supposed to be improving the security, health, and happiness for all mankind. Besides, many separate communities like that exist in the first place out of a necessity to survive because they don't have the opportunities to blend into the culture."

"Sure, that's true in many cases, but by allowing others to immigrate over here it also gives criminals like terrorists and drug dealers an opportunity. Does this not scare you?"

"Of course it does. I agree with you that that's something we should protect ourselves from. At the same time, we should be fighting against the drug use here to decrease the demand."

PEDS is the Professional Ethics Dialogues Society, created last semester. Many issues in the world don't have a single right answer, and the main objective of PEDS is to get people to think of these issues from different viewpoints. The organization will publish a weekly article that will show at least two sides to an argument, working hard to make the argument as equal as possible.
