The IIT Music department, Tech Alumni association, will Milwaukee alumni organization Milwaukee November 21.

The first of three concerts will be presented for the Allis-Chalmers manufacturing company in West Allis, Wisconsin. After dinner, a tour planned by Allis-Chalmers will acquaint the club with the operations of the plant.

Following the visit to the plant, the plans call for a concert at Pabst Brewing company and supper in Pabst's Rathskeller.

In the evening the last of the programs will be presented at the Downers College for women. After the performance, the men have been invited to stay for an informal dance, for which the IIT swing band will supply music. The arrangements for the concert at the college were made largely through the efforts of Kenneth Walters, a member of the glee club.

Marines Plan Smoker For Next Wednesday

A reunion-smoker for all marine corps veterans attending Illinois Tech will be held next Wednesday in the North Union auditorium.

The smoker, sponsored by the Marine Corps League, will begin at 7 p.m. and will feature movies and refreshments. Warren S. Sivertsen, director of admissions, who holds a major's commission in the Marine Corps Reserve, emphasized that the meeting will give marine veterans an opportunity to renew service-made acquaintances and to meet other men in the student body whose interests and experiences are very similar to their own.

Invitations will be sent to those marine veterans among the approximately 2500 veterans now in attendance at IIT; those veterans not receiving invitations may obtain one in the Admissions Office, room 201, NSU.

Techmen Talk

By Eugene R. Stanley

QUESTION: Do you feel that you have enough voice in student affairs?

Bill Plice, Junior EE:

"If representation isn't what it should be it's mainly the fault of the students. Adequate machinery has been set up for participation in campus affairs.

"The veterans seem to care more for school work than extra-curricular activities on the campus. My spare time is quite well taken up without filling in the gaps with extra campus activities. I am also of the opinion that more students are working part time than ever before, leaving less time for any active participation in school activities.

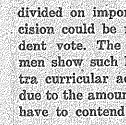

"Lastly, the makeup of the engineering student is quite different from that of the student in a liberal arts college. Engineers seem to prefer a sort of technical isolation to social affairs."

Roger Wolff, Junior EE:

"I think that student representation would be improved if main issues requiring a decision were put to a general vote after ITSA reduces them to two or three choices. The Integral Ball was a good case in point where the question of its being formal or not could have been put to a student vote. I do believe that the veterans in general are more apathetic toward school functions than the non-veterans. They are interested mainly in getting through school and have little time for extra activities."

Robert Lawrence, Soph CE:

"I think the students have enough say-so but many of them are too busy to do much about it. If they wanted something done they could have it enacted by means of petitions providing they all got together. The ITSA is about as fair a system as we could have. Where opinion is divided on important matters a decision could be reached thru a student vote. The main reason Tech men show such little interest in extra-curricular activities is probably due to the amount of homework they have to contend with."

Arthur Eberstein, Soph Physics:

"The student who wants to take part in school events can, if he desires, express his opinion thru Technology News as was evidenced shortly after registration by the number of published complaints.

"If one is not employed outside, then, I think that the amount of homework is not too great as to interfere with his taking part in extra-curricular activities. I do want to say, however, that when elections for the ITSA are held they should be publicized much more than they have been because that group does a very important job.

"I also believe that the average student here has very little school spirit as compared to students at other schools."

'Smokey' Performs For Large Crowd

Before a standing-room-only crowd in the auditorium of North Union, Harry "Smokey" Rogers, with the assistance of attractive Frances Monahan, Betty Fortman, and Patricia Baumhardt, presented a magic show on November 4, entitled "Smokey's Shenanigans in Sorcery."

Goldfish and flowers seemingly appeared from nowhere, Silk flags multiplied and disappeared at Smokey's command, neckties cut to pieces reappeared intact, and one Charles Frisbe was left holding an unshelled egg in his hand.

After a short intermission, Smokey and company returned to the stage wearing oriental costumes for the performance of the finale, "The Magic Carpet of Bagdad." Here, an assistant, who was hypnotized, seemed to float in midair.

Weekly Dances Held In Hotel Sherman

Dance enthusiasts now have the opportunity to enjoy their favorite entertainment at a new series of Sunday evening dances.

The Hotel Sherman Bal Tabarin room is the place, and the St. Peter's Church Building fund is the sponsor. Personal appearances of stage and screen stars are anticipated as the weekly dances progress. Informal mixing is the keynote of each dance.
