

Irrationalities of men studied by new maze

By Puss N. Boots
Dr. Tom Felix of our psychology department, who is world renowned for his experiments with paraplegic homo sapiens, has just begun work on a new complex homo maze. This maze will be used to determine the magnitude of neurosis of the homos and to what degree they can be controlled.

"Homo sapiens are used because of the similarity of their nervous system to that of a cat's," Dr. Felix said. He believes that if he can operate on the large growth on the front of the brain of the homos, they will possibly begin to rationalize as do all felines.

The homo's irrationality was demonstrated by the fact that Dykman, Dr. Felix' pet, upon finishing the maze attempted to attack our photographer.

MINOR MORSELS

Thaddeus Yschlpmkowitz, general promoter of the Smooth Shaftings acting group, has issued a warning to all those foolish enough to buy tickets for this year's show: "Be prepared to put up with the dullest, corniest and lousiest play this campus has ever seen! I shrink to think about it."

In an exclusive interview, Mr. Yschlpmkowitz went on to explain: "Originally, the plot was written to appeal to IIT students; that is, 100 per cent sex. But when school officials heard of this they made made us cut it down to 99 per cent. As you know, the acoustics of the NSU auditorium are out of this world, and there's where they belong! There isn't enough lighting and stage equipment to do justice to even a Rialto review."

"But don't take my word for it. See for yourself just how crummy things can get. Crash, beg or bribe your way in—you'll appreciate the sleep. Remember, the show must go on—we need the money."

Fred W. Anheuser, factory superintendent of the Anheuser-Busch shoe company, will deliver a spiel to the local chapter of the Society for the Advancement of Morons at 1 p.m. in 131MC. Water Colder, SAM veep, announced the meeting somewhat ruefully. "Our organization is dedicated to movies and brewery trips. We got tricked into this." Colder explained that he had intended to get the brewmaster of the Nunn-Bush brewery.
