completion of a painting of one who must work alone form the lessons herein outlined. In spite of these drawbacks, one can learn much by doing for onesself and it is hoped that the eighteen excercises will serve as a stimulating guide to those who wish to find a new direction in design and color.

Mary Henry

Institute of Design