

Rhymes of the Profs

There was once a professor called Mac,
And people who loafed he would sack,
He ran against Tony,
Who worked with a Bony,
And Tony must hump to get back.

There was once a professor named Perry,
Whose footsteps were light as a fairy,
His assignment of text
Was, "Please take the next,"
Which is neither warm nor hot-air-y.

There once was a mister named Leigh,
Who taught us the function dt,
But he's gone to the bad,
For he's married, by gad,
And no longer takes life so e z.
