

"I regard the combination of two such giant industrial Universities as one of the greatest possible menaces to the common people. I and my papers have done all that was possible to prevent such a union, but with the Republican party in power, and the present corrupt condition of the Senate, prevention was impossible. I hope, however, to soon be able to present to my readers a detailed account of the manner in which such a combination was effected. It will undoubtedly be of use in preventing any similar ones in the future."

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

"Well, I guess we pretty near laid it over old U. of C. that time. They always tried to put through a big bluff, but we knew they didn't fill on a two card draw, so it was dead easy to raise 'em off the board, especially when we were sitting back with a pat hand. Those fellows want to take a few lessons before they try to crawl up on an Armour man."

PROMINENT ARMOUR STUDENT.

"I really do not know why President Harper and Mr. Rockefeller should be, to use a vulgar expression, so keen to affiliate with Armour. I suppose that it is a rather good engineering school, but in my personal opinion, the fellows who attend it are not really high class. They are very much addicted to the use of slang, and smoke strong, bad-smelling pipes, instead of nice, light cigarettes. They wear rough clothes, and really seem to enjoy getting dirty. I really cannot say that they appeal to me."

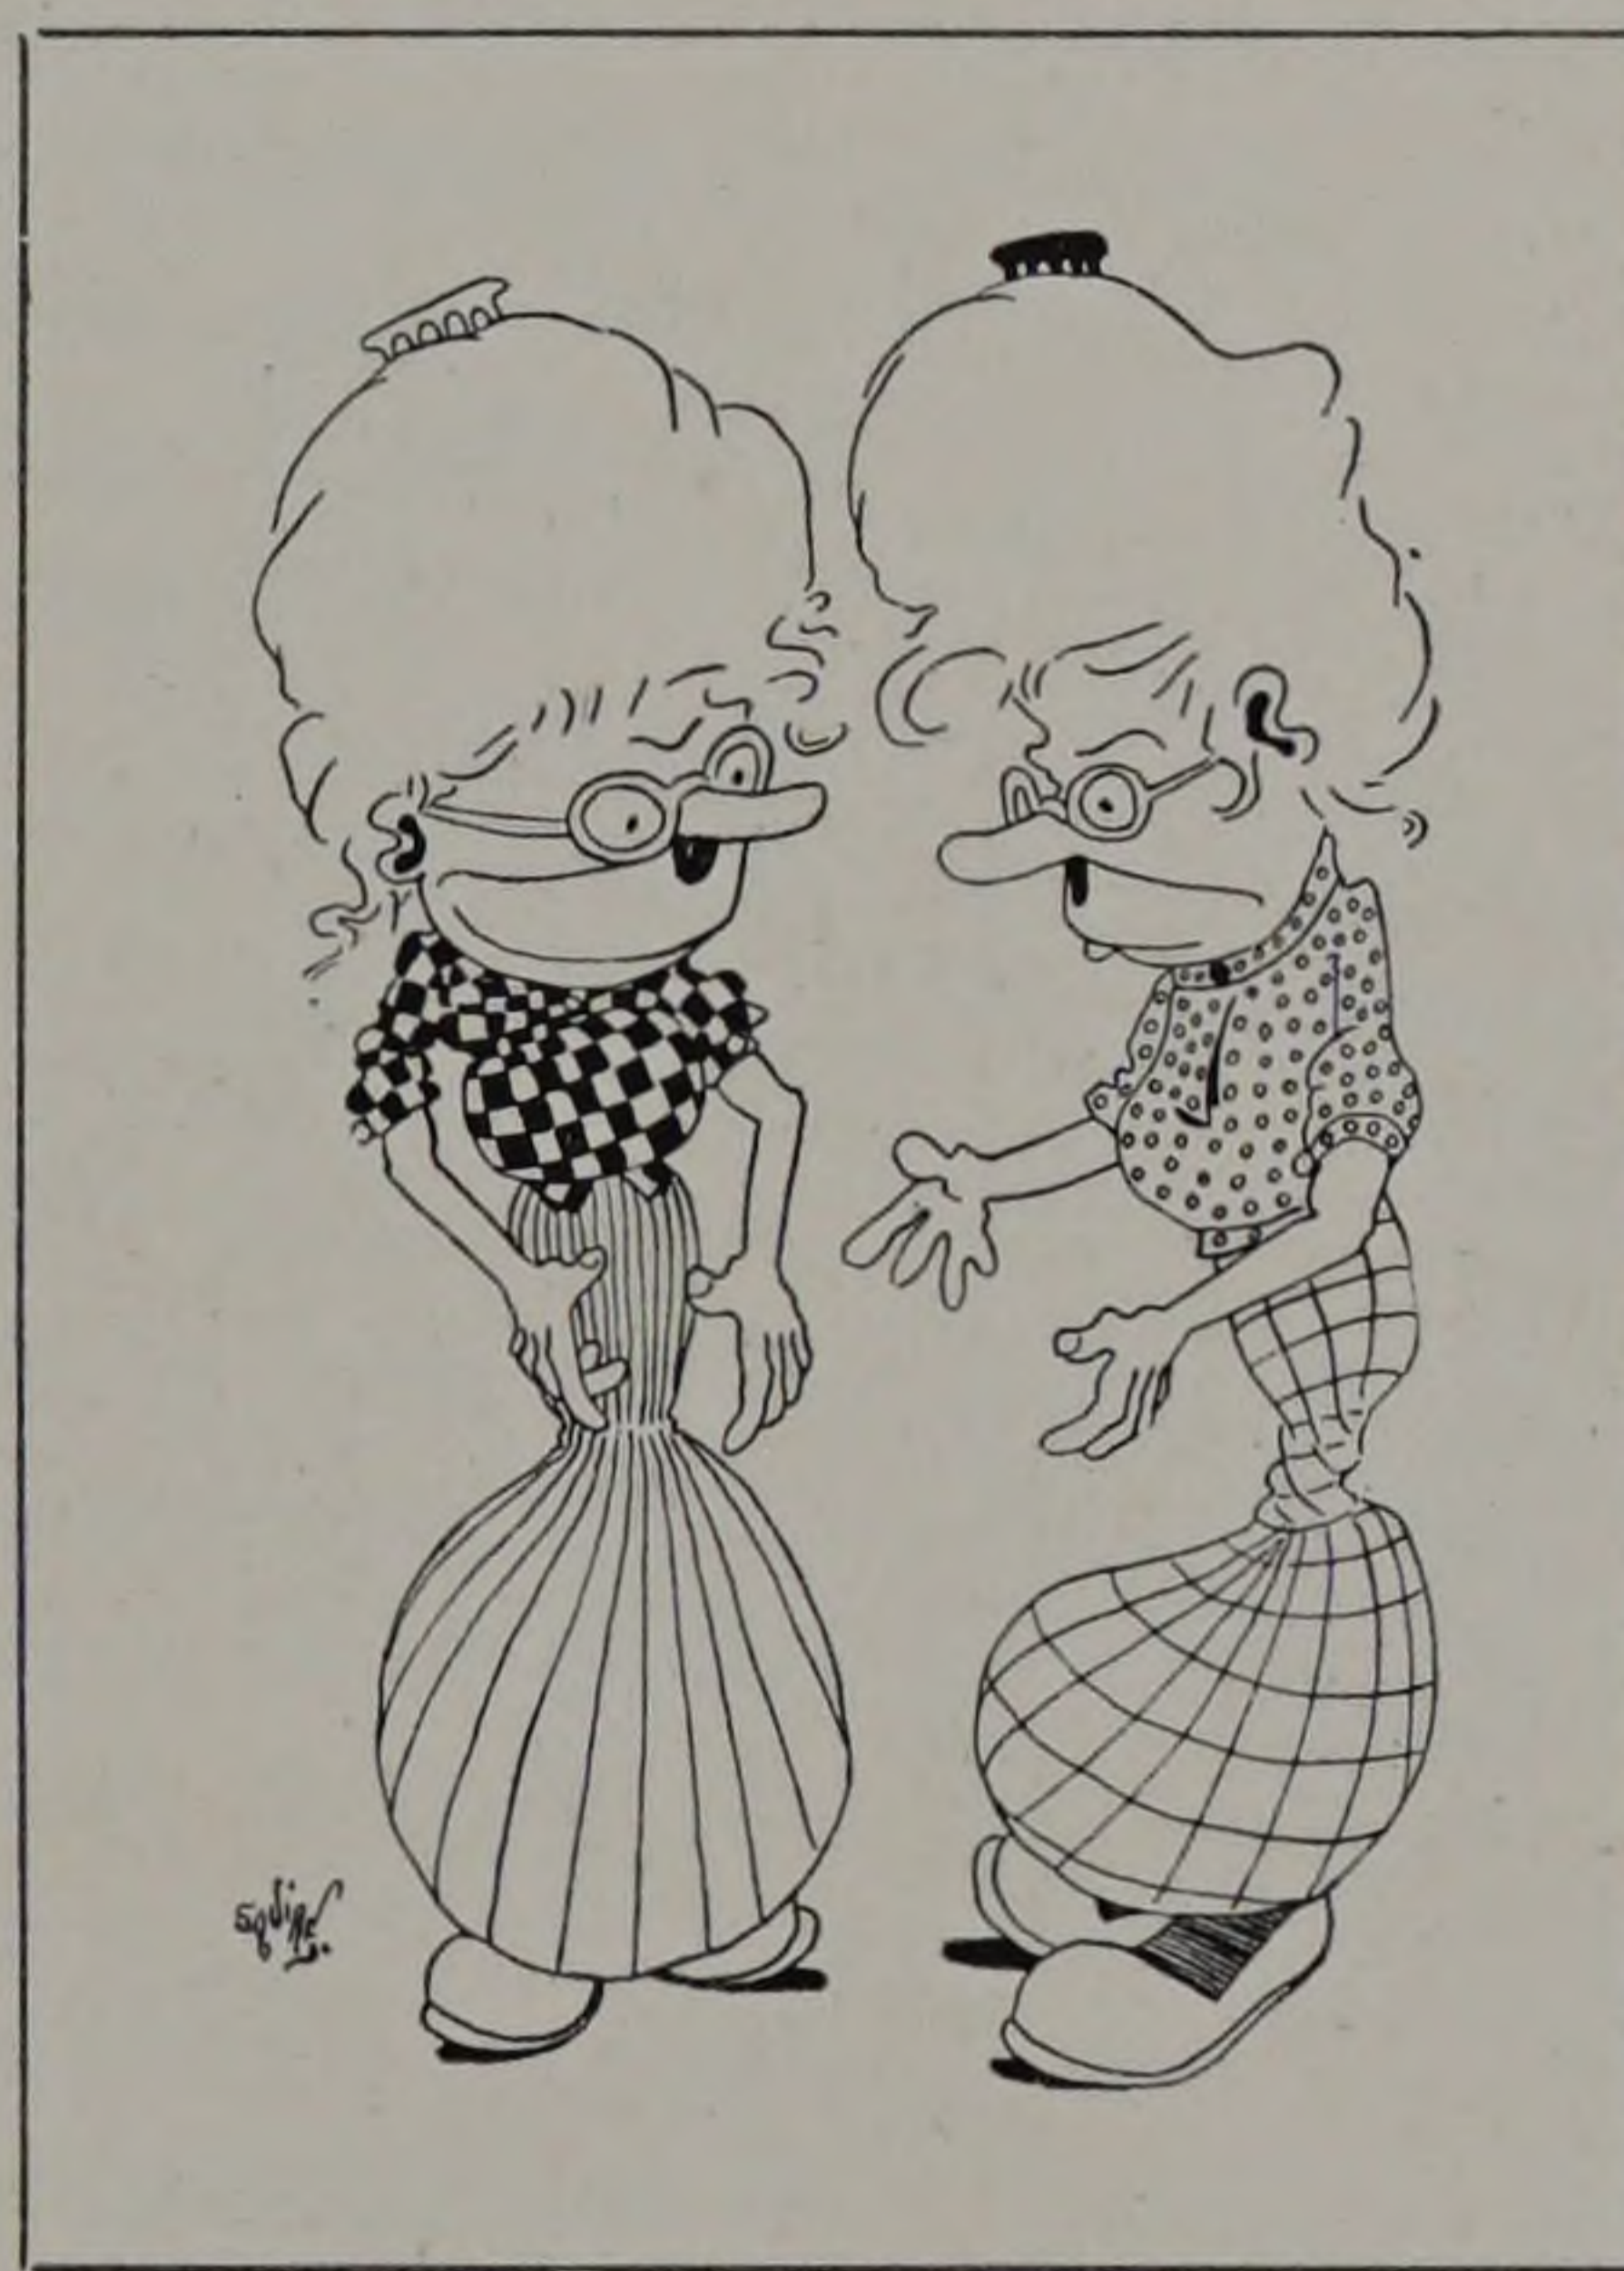

PROMINENT CHICAGO STUDENT.

BIFF—I tell you the house was moved at his word.

BANG—Who was he?

BIFF—A contractor.

MRS. SLATS—How did Jones' house catch fire?

MRS. BATS—He and his wife got into a heated argument.
