The senior year of the '06 Civils showed a partial relaxation from the strenuous course of study of former years and gave the Civil Society a chance to carry out one of its objects, namely, to promote sociability. The year has been marked by a succession of theatre parties, smokers, and dinners. However, this year's activities have not all been of a social nature, as the record of former years has been fully equaled in regard to inspection visits and profitable discussions.

At a recent meeting the officers formally resigned and arrangements were made to prevent the dissolution of the society after the class has graduated. Accordingly, a permanent secretary was elected to keep the scattered members in touch with each other.
