

RADICAL X DANCE October 1, 1909

THE first dance of the college year was given by the Radical X Society on Friday evening, October 1st, at the Ridge Country Club. The dance was strictly informal, and was given principally to get acquainted with the Freshmen who had just been taken into the society. Favorable chance was truly with the Radics on this occasion, for one of those very rare, perfect moonlight nights was furnished. And it will be admitted that such an evening appeals to a person in an especial manner away off from the city in such a place as Tracey, where the Ridge Country Club is located.

After a somewhat long, although universally enjoyed ride on a Rock Island local train, some forty-five members of the society, and the same number of persons wearing Radic pins, assembled in the hall to enjoy the first dance, which was played at about 8 o'clock. From that time until 12 the dancing continued with but short intermissions between long dances and with everyone having the very best kind of a time. The music was furnished by Mr. C. A. Lawrence and assistant of Lawrence's Orchestra, which has furnished such excellent music for so many Armour dances.

RADICAL X INFORMAL November 13, 1909

Yes, it's a fact that one wore red and black and that the other wore black and red. Also, the one who wore red and black danced all evening with the one who wore black and red—very stunning, don't you know.

The occasion referred to was that of the Radical X Informal, which was given at the Old Masonic Temple in Englewood on November 13th, and on which occasion the aforesaid reds and blacks were so in evidence.

Although the night was dark and rainy, practically the entire active membership of the organization and several alumni were present to enjoy this second Radic dance of the semester. But it's always fair weather when a bunch of Radics get together.

"No trials, no triumphs."
