A. I. E. E. SMOKER

A smoker was held at the Chapin Club rooms on Thursday evening, November 9th, by the Armour branch of the A. I. E. E. One particularly helpful feature was the attendance of the professors of the electrical department, who showed by their presence that they are with us to keep the branch up to the usual standard of the past. After the usual 25-cent cigars, etc., an informal meeting took place. Prof. Freeman spoke on the topic, "Painless Extraction of Armature Teeth," after which the other professors added a few words. The professors entertained the bunch with a game of billiards (?), Prof. Snow being the star performer. The lights then went out, so that the smoker had to be adjourned.

A. S. M. E. SMOKER

The Mechanical Society wishing to uphold the dignity of that worthy organization in fact, and name, gave a smoker for the benefit of the members on November 10, 1909. In the early part of the evening Bergbom did a few fancy gymnastics on the mahogany rag box, commonly known as the piano, while other worthy members of the society endeavored to come to his rescue with the joyful execution of a little vocal expression. Strange, but true, the cognomen "smoker" was rightfully applied, and through the bluish haze stude and prof. alike, mingled with all class room affairs forgotten. Cider and pretzels added the finishing touch to the evening's enjoyment.

"When all else is lost the future still remains."
