We now have at Armour three publications, the Cycle, the Fulcrum, and the Armour Engineer. In order to have smooth co-operation between the different executive heads, we have as a common council, the Sphinx Society. The executive heads of these publications and two faculty representatives are members ex-officio, and any member who has served one year on these publications, but who has not held executive positions on same, may be elected to membership.

The Sphinx Society is not only a managing and social organization, but is also an honorary society, membership to which can only be had through merit of service on the different student publications.
