

S O C I A L

The 8th annual Junior week, May 5-10, 1913 was one to which that illustrious class of '14 as well as the rest of the college may well look back to and echo with one voice, just '14's style. Starting with the Alumni-Varsity game, our evening with the Junior Prom at the Colonial, the Mardi Gras spirit never flagged.

On the afternoon of May 5, the "old boys" staged their plays against a younger generation and to the spectators at least, the old guards played in true varsity form. The hit of the game was the Trinkaus trio, what with Trinkaus '08, pitching for the alumni, Trinkaus '15, fielding for Tech. and Trinkaus, Sr. arbitrating behind the bat it was a lively scene.

Tuesday the 6th was reserved for "Looking for Mary Jane." And right here we must stop and tell you, kind reader, that making up the searching party to look for the lost one was a difficult task, and to none should be given greater credit than to the players, the author, the management, and those who came to the Mission with their own "Janes" to search for an hour or two, and be recorded with the finding of that illustrious maid. (This does not leave anybody without thanks and so we may all be satisfied.)

The cast of the illustrious company was as follows:

GORDON BARBER	}	Globe Trotters
ART MOELLER
C. E. H. WOLFLEY
JOE WRIGHT	.	Landlady's daughter
F. N. COMPTON	.	Mary Jane
H. C. NERTNEY	.	A Maid
F. W. HOOK	.	An Opera Singer
LOUIS HIRSH	.	An Impressario
WALLACE STEININGER	.	A Chinaman
JOSEPH ZAVERTNICK	.	A Detective

And what a cast this was, but to get down to our story, as a dramatic critic would remark. But the story is well known to all, needless to remark, and though it might bear repetition we won't repeat it as we are liable to spoil it. My Goodness, Agnes, did you ever see such a "Jane" as one Mary Jane, alias Compton, with a
