

This Was An Frosh.

She—Do you ever read Shakes-peare?

He—Yes, I've read it. The man who wrote that was certainly a great man.

MacMullen in Bacteriology.

"Parasites grow best at the temperature of human blood, 98.4 Degrees Fahrenheit, but there are some animals having a higher temperature. For example, the chicken has a blood temperature of 104 degrees."

Laughter in the rear.

"Of course there are different kinds of chicken."

Try to Picture:

"Li'l' Art" Moeller running the two mile.

Fat Oldenburger making a recitation without bluffing.

Pearce without his "mop."

Dean Monin "working as a ditch-digger and being happy" at the same time.

Charley Swartz without a smile.

Carver acting civilized.

DeCelle not tending strictly to business.

Racehorse Dumke winning a hundred yard dash.

Fred Farrar not being polite.

Ed Menke taking a female part in a Junior Play.

Louie Hirsh getting out in a track suit.

Chubby Zook unhappy.

A certain young lady at Golden,
Once sought her best beau to embolden.
By observing, "Don't you,
"Think one chair's nuff for two?"
And now when he calls she is holden.
