HULLINGER: The only Freshman to win his letter in baseball, beside Conway, was "Strings" Hullinger. At the beginning of the season he was an aspirant for the first base job, but later was transferred to the outfield, where he showed a knack for gathering in flies. He had a mighty hard job to try and break into that outfield combination, but nevertheless, he played in enough games to win his A. This year he promises to hold down a job as a regular, and as he has three more years to play, no doubt will prove a valuable man to Coach Schommer.

HALL: Hall has been the "Tech" utility man ever since he was a Freshman, and his extreme versatility makes him a very valuable man. During his career at Armour he has played at third, at second, and in the outfield. His greatest delight, however, was to pinch hit for Dutch Herman, and to be on the coaching line whenever Bruce got on base. Although Hall never tried to pitch, it is the opinion of some that he missed his calling, as he has a strong arm and breaks bats the same as a pitcher, and left-handed one at that. Seriously, however, Hall is a mighty good ball player, and as he still has two more years to play, he will no doubt prove to be one of Armour's best men this year and next.

CHAMBERLAIN: No doubt fate had a grudge against Joe Chamberlain early last spring, for she certainly dealt him a hard blow. In the first game of the season Joe held the Chicago University to four hits and one run, while his team-mates piled up a total of nine runs behind him. Soon after this game Joe was taken sick, and did not participate in any more games until near the end of the season. When he came back, it was as an infielder, as he was not strong enough to pitch. In Chamberlain, the Institute loses one of its best ball players, and we regret that he was not able to give his best during his last year, as no doubt he would have had an enviable record.

HERMAN: This article might be entitled "The Passing of 'Dutch' Herman," for, after this issue, the Cycle will no longer have the opportunity to tell of the exploits of that sterling Herman. For the past three years, baseball, the "Tech," and "Dutch Herman" have been analogous terms, and it is with fear that we look into the future and imagine what will be in store for the "Tech" without her "Flying Dutchman." Dutch was the third member of that great outfield, and last year marked the closing of a remarkable career. In 1913, Dutch led the Little Five Conference with a batting average of .505. Dutch had great confidence in his arm, and never tired of the futile attempt to catch the runner at the plate after a sacrifice fly.
