In the tug of war the whole school showed itself in action. The seniors pulled against the juniors. The former were forced to give way to superior numbers although they were liberally helped. The sophomores and freshmen were more evenly matched. The sophomores finally won out after a strenuous pull for ten minutes.

The inter-fraternity relay race as usual, was an exciting feature of the day. The Beta Phi team, consisting of Finkl, Erickson, Kerr and Mendius won a closely contested race with Omega Lambda at their heels. A handsome loving cup was the prize.

One stunt that should not be forgotten was the peanut race. The men who took part had great difficulty in finding their peanuts, due to the fact that many students forgot to eat lunch at noon. As free lunch is very scarce now, they thought this a good opportunity to satisfy their craving appetites.

And so evening came on, and we had to leave. Much credit must be given to Marshall Kerr, for staging such a successful circus.
