Junior week was a decided success. The play, "Lucky Seventh," was written by Eeverett Quinn an old Armour man, and through his coaching it went across in fine style. The Banquet at the Aviation Club of Chicago and the Prom in the Florentine Room of the Congress Hotel were both a success as well as Circus day with the Mustache contest, field events and parade.

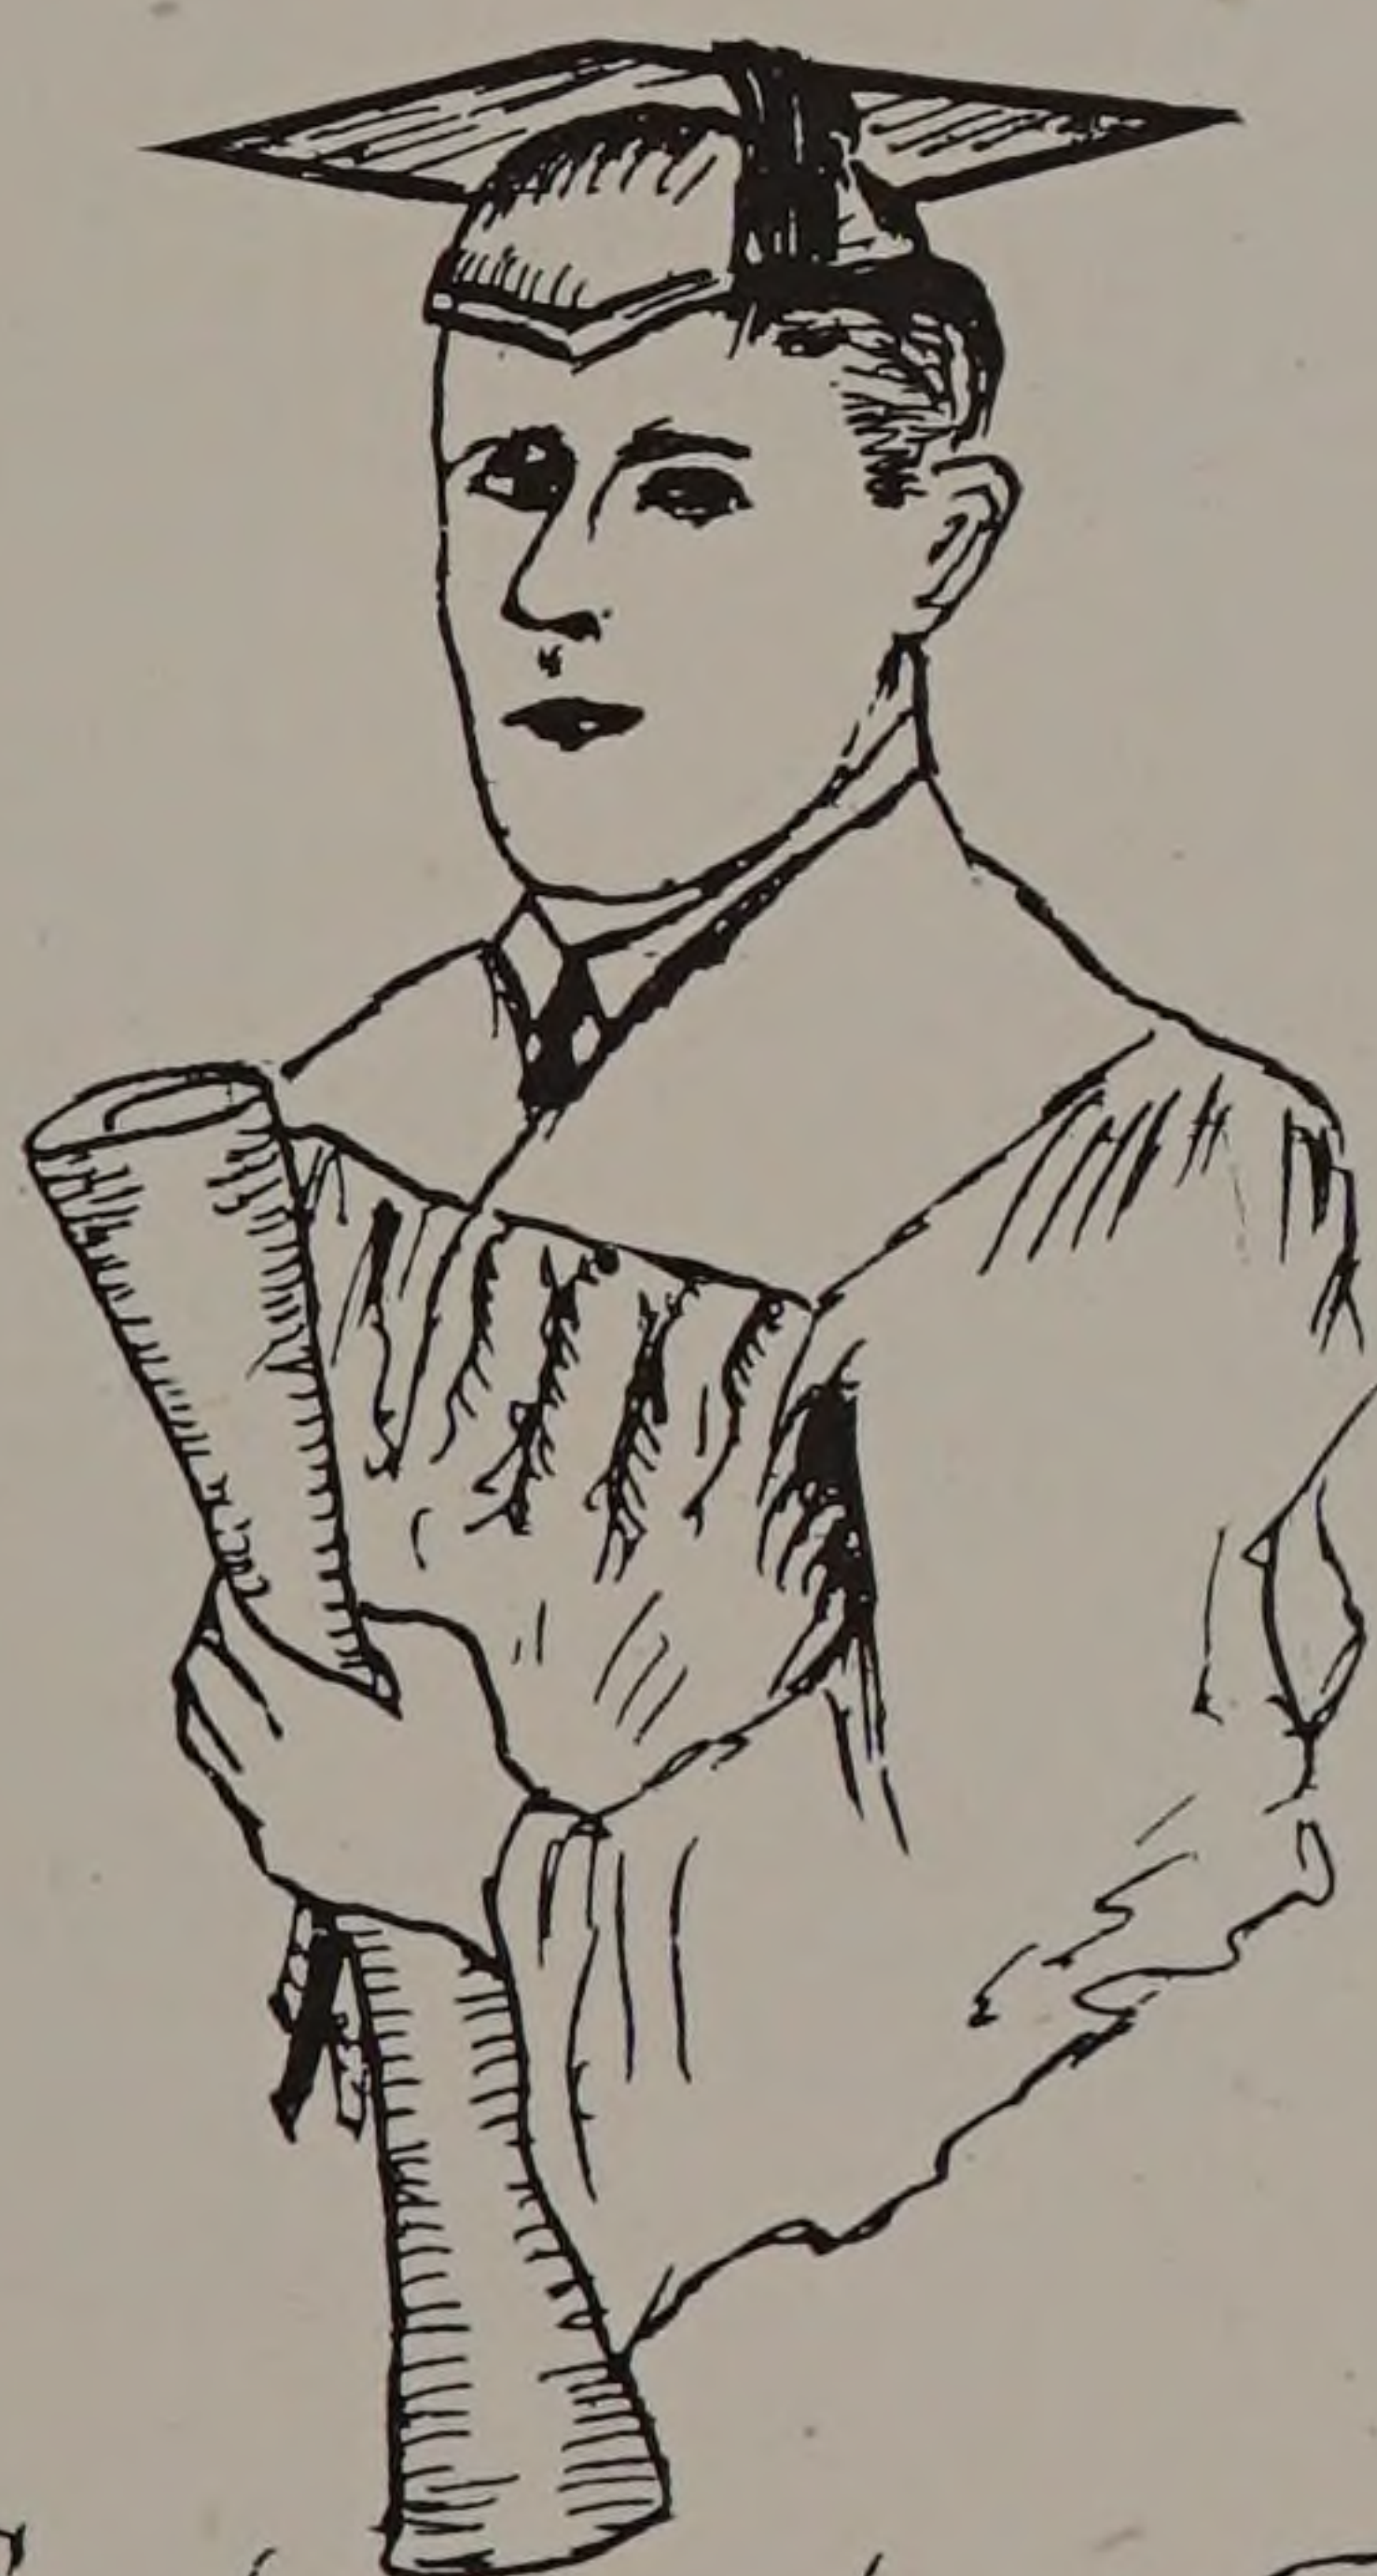

We had charge of the Cycle and published a book that was a credit to the class.

Athletics flourished and we had several "A" men on our teams.

This year brought us back with a determination of making it the best one ever. Officers were elected and the first dance was held at the Sherman House and it proved a success with Lyons at the wheel.

In a short time, graduation will reveal itself to us. We are on the home stretch, at the place where Freshman go out of their way to speak to us, and have therefore resolved to do our share as Alumni to reflect credit upon our Alma Mater.

We wish to thank the President, Deans and Faculty for their efforts in helping us attain the goal we set four years ago. May they think of the class of 1921 with as high esteem as we as individuals think of them.
