

JUNIORS

We have with us today the well known and far famed class of 1922, of the Armour Institute of Technology. Of course every well informed person knows all about the present Junior class, but perchance there are a few poor, suffering representatives of humanity, upon whom cruel fate has forced a miserable existence, without knowledge of the class of 1922,—for the benefit of these last mentioned few hapless individuals, I will attempt to enumerate a few facts concerning this super class.

The Junior class as a whole is unlike all of the other classes. The class has not the haughty coldness of the Seniors, the meek greenness of the Freshmen, nor the obnoxious arrogance of the Sophomores. Were it not for the ability of the class of '22, the basket ball and the baseball teams, the Glee Club and the Jazz Band, the Cycle and the Engineer, would all be sad failures. In addition to all this the Juniors are the brains of the Armour Institute. For the first time in twelve years Prof. Paul did not give any Valentines in Junior Mechanics; and at the end of the year, at least fifteen members of this honored class will have finished Freshman Drawing. The class also contains such famous personages as: Terence McSwinnery McCaffrey and Clarence Herbst, the well known Mechanics sharks; Leon Trotzky Nowakowski and Eli Slobod, the eminent Philosophers, Orators, Moralists, and Literary Critics; Ike Blum, the pride of the Math. department, and last but not least, Max Marine, the joy of the Chem. Department, who handed a red hot flask to his partner, Rosenzweig, "because it was too hot to hold". This is a very small list of the celebrities of our class, as it was forced, after electing,

H. A. PETERSON.....President
G. D. WETHERBEE.....Vice-President
G. H. KELLEY.....Secretary
E. M. SEABERG.....Treasurer

to appoint a Cycle Staff and about a dozen committees before the talent of the class could be anywhere near occupied with class duties. As was said before, the above list is small and the information meager, but those who wish to know more concerning these, or data concerning other members of the class, will find reliable and complete information in "Whose Who in America". Lack of space compels me to close now, although it would be but a child's task to write volumes on the merits of this class. I feel, however, that before I close, I must confess that this otherwise perfect class has one fault; its excessive modesty.
