This organization is not very well known, as far as the student body is concerned, but it is very important in the general and social welfare of our faculty. It is here, during the noon hour, that our professors obtain the rest and relaxation which they need so much after a hard morning in the classroom.

In the lounging room are discussed all the momentous problems of the day. It is said that here the National and American League championships are settled long before the deciding games are played. One can well imagine the titanic upheaval which is caused by a discussion between several of our sedate instructors upon such timely subjects as prohibition or the League of Nations.

The loan fund, which is held in trust by the club is a great aid to those students who at times may be in need of some ready money for a short time but who have not the business references to obtain it elsewhere. The Faculty Club is a means of bringing the instructors together; it provides a place where they may read and play at their leisure, and is also an aid in promoting team work and clean play among the students of the Institute.
