

There are a few notables in this outfit: Jeff Corydon, who did his best to run this year's Cycle into debt; Jimmy Watt, who discovered that molecules divided by electrons gives the number of amperes in a volt; Seaberg, who makes away with the Junior class dues; and the Herbst brothers, Mike and Ike, who are sometimes friends, even though brothers.

BETA PHI

Beta Phi consists of a bunch of loafers who spend their time as freshmen in shooting baskets up in Charlie's emporium instead of copying the details of nuts and bolts from the fellow next to them in Prof. Reid's sanctum, as they should have done. They were the same way with all of their subjects, always flunking everything but gym at least once.

Beta Phi has a house, but a very few of the members have ever been in it, as they all spend all of their time over at the Chicago College of Physical Education, where most of them are known well enough to sponge two or three meals a day. All of the rest at least keep the living room chairs in place, each one with the assistance of a fair student of the C. C. P. E., who also assists in keeping her Beta Phi friend in the chair. If you are not willing to flunk all of your subjects, and spend all of your time at the C. C. P. E., you had better steer clear of this outfit. The notables in this gang are mostly athletes, Mexican and otherwise.

RHO DELTA RHO

This bunch consists of a gang of misfits who always come into all of the basketball games before the ticket collector gets there. However, the fame of this outfit is due to its initiations, which are terrible ordeals lasting eleven days. During this time those being initiated are not allowed to eat, sleep, or rest. After the eleven days are over, the victims run a race to Oak Park and back, the winner being rewarded with the privilege to sleep for half an hour on the horizontal bar in the gym, after which he may break his fast with a copper plated linoleum pancake. Anyone who thinks that they can go through with the initiation is privileged to join. There is nothing to this frat but the pin and the initiation, so that anyone is safe in joining.

THE OHR

The Ohr is a half baked frat, which means that the deans think that it is not a frat, while the members think that it is. It is a pretty good idea to join the Ohr, as almost all of the members own hock shops where you can pick up some good things cheap, if you are a member. Most of this outfit admit that they are intellectual, but they have kept it such a secret that nobody else knows it. The worst thing about the Ohr is that the pledges are not allowed to talk to their girls. The notables in this bunch are: Newman and Maranz, who made last year's Cycle what it was; and Carl Unger, who blows a wicked sax.

TAU BETA PI

Tau Beta Pi is an honorary frat, which means that all of the members have gotten marks of A, or lower, during their career at Armour. The chapter consists of a long string of intellectual profs, and a few students, who admit that they are the cream of the school as far as brains go. The only requirements for admission are that you have a pair of tortoise shell-rimmed glasses in order to look intellectual, and that you are able to work all of the problems on page 869 in Campbell's Calculus, which would prove that you were intellectual.
