JOSEPH JOHN WALLACE

Born August 19, 1898.

Joliet Township High School.

The only thing that we can say against Joe is that he took reinforced concrete too seriously. In spite of this, he's an all-'round good fellow and given half a chance, he'll make his mark in the world. Conscientious, unassuming, a good student, he has lived up to the standard of Armour. In the future as we turn to this page we'll proudly point to his picture and say, "I knew him."

JAMES HUSTON WATT

Born September 2, 1901, Pontiac, Illinois.

High School, Creston, Iowa.

Sigma Kappa Delta, W. S. E.

Jimmie, while not a Scotch inventor as his name might indicate, may soon be laying sewers and water pipes in the Philippine Islands. Although the electrical book says that a watt is equal to volts multiplied by amperes, this one is the product of the great "city" of Downers Grove. However, his heart is in Pontiac. You have seen her at many of the Armour dances, even though Jimmie did cheat now and then to take one of his Columbia friends. In spite of his love for the fair sex he will no doubt make a good engineer.
