

ATHLETICS

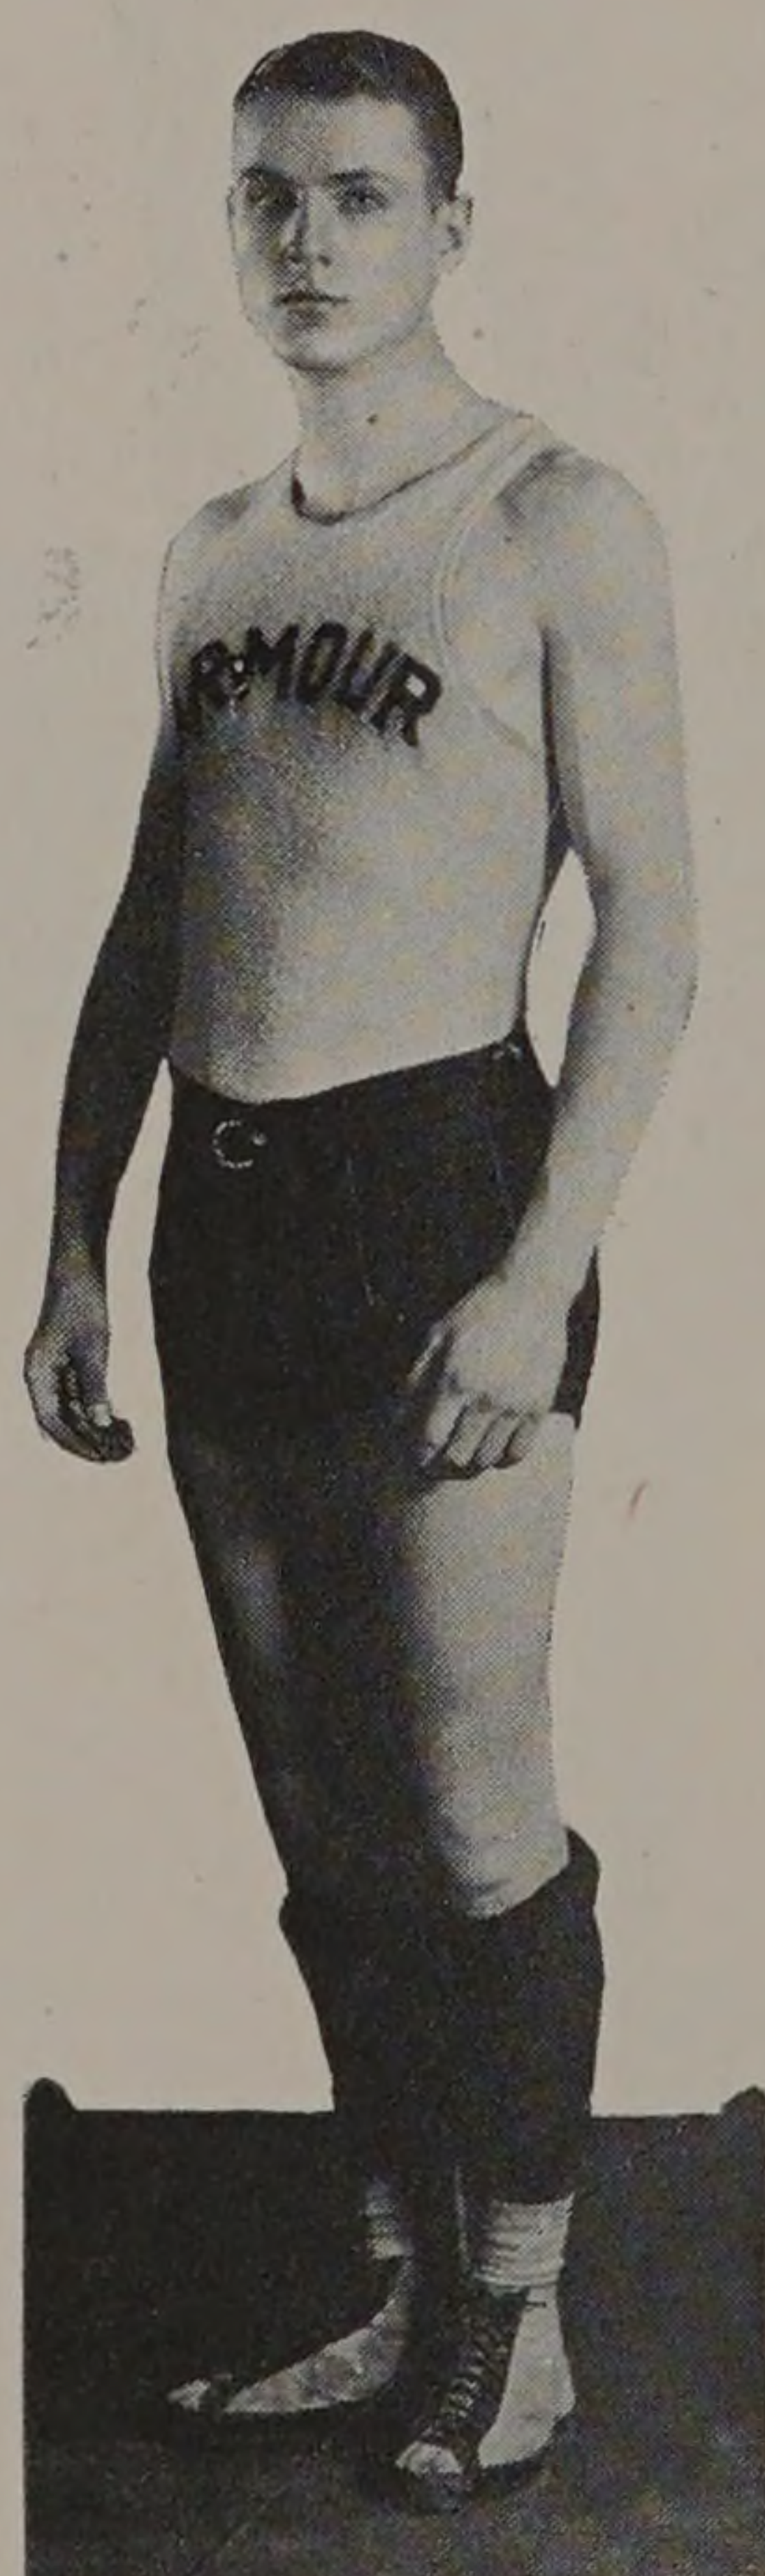

JOHNSON

"Swede" Johnson at guard broke into the game as a regular in mid-season and from this time on he continued to play better ball in each game. On defense he covered his man like an octopus, managing to keep the ball well out of dangerous territory. He showed good judgment at dribbling and passing. Beside these qualities, "Swede" had a fighting spirit that was unconquerable, which was combined with a sure eye for the basket. Great things are expected of "Swede" for 1922-23, when he will have completed his third year of varsity basketball for Armour.

Spaid playing his first year at center, invariably managed to get the jump on his opponent, which is a great factor in a well balanced offense of any team. Injuries kept him out of several important games. In the games he took part in he gave promises of a great man for next year. His speed combined with this year's experience, will make him a man to be watched in 1922-23.

SPAID

GREENLEAF

Jack made up for his lack of size by possessing a great amount of fight and endurance. He had a good eye for a basket and this along with his year's experience will make him a man who will have to be reckoned with in the picking of next year's Varsity.
