FRESHMAN DANCE

The Class of Nineteen Twenty-five held its first dance in the Red Room of the LaSalle April twenty-first. The Freshmen demonstrated that they possessed the real Armour Institute pep and spirit by giving us a dance that stands as a mark for future classes to shoot at. The room needs no description and the music was by Walter Ford's six-piece orchestra and the many engineers and their "sweet women" only stopped long enough to regain lost breath. To make the evening a perfect one, the music played until one o'clock, when the crowd reluctantly left.
