

The carpenter dresses his planks—the tongue of his fore-plane whistles its wild ascending lip. —Walt Whitman.