The Armour Engineer Editorial

Nelson has been responsible for the care-free attitude of the editor these last few months.

George Arachovitis has exercised his talents in a variety of ways: writing articles in addition to securing ads.

The problems of Circulation have been ably handled by Rowley.

Articles have been under the jurisdiction of "Gene" Odenwaldt and "Stan" Larson. Gene in handling local prospects has visited practically every office building in the loop while trailing the prospect to his lair. Larson has been concerned with the correspondence on articles, and so bulky has his mail become, that he was engaged to three typists this last year.

Luth has handled a difficult position in a satisfactory manner, both to The Armour Engineer and to the organization as well.

Meyer has developed Engineering News from a section featuring abstracts to one containing genuine news on local engineering work.

Geiger, as a baseball man, needs no introduction. His experience on the diamond, together with a keen interest in all sports, has particularly qualified him to write Athletics.

The outward aspect of a periodical furnishes an index to its contents. Senescall, in designing the covers and handling the art work, has helped materially to make our readers' first glimpse a favorable one.

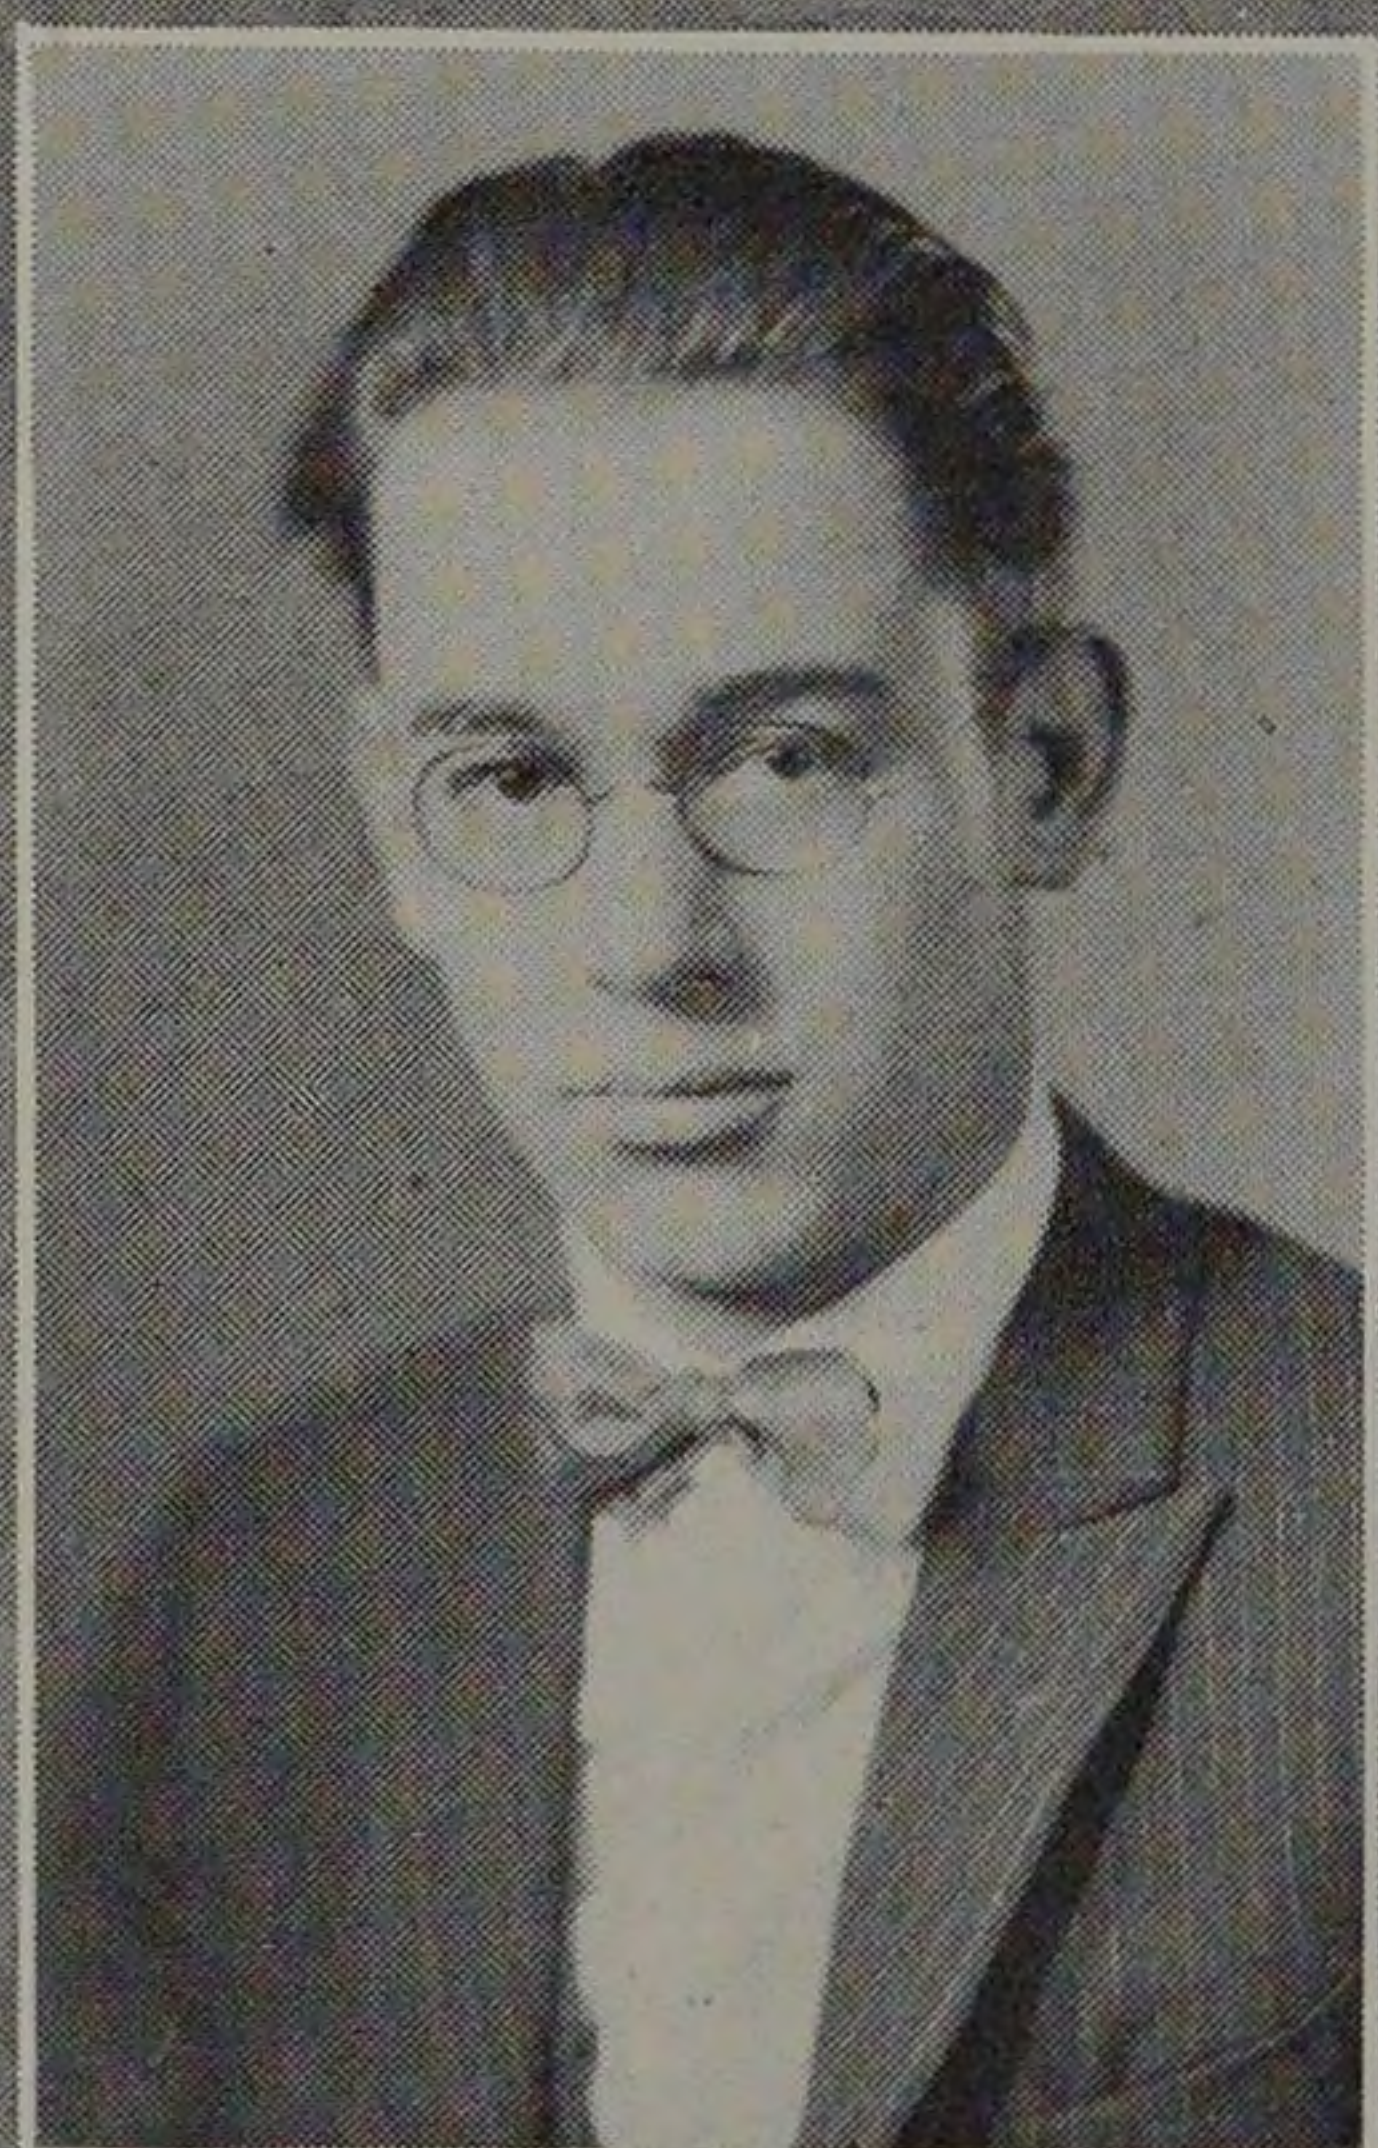

Schweitzer, altho burdened with many interests, including an all-consuming passion for the more serious features of radio, has been instrumental in securing material for the Alumnus.

Whenever the demand has arisen for photographic work, Perry has been at hand with his camera.

The more serious pages of the Armour Engineer have been lightened by refreshing touches of Humor contributed by Bishop.

We must acknowledge a very real indebtedness to Professor Peebles, not only for the excellent character of alumni news, but also for his inimitable sketches of student life.

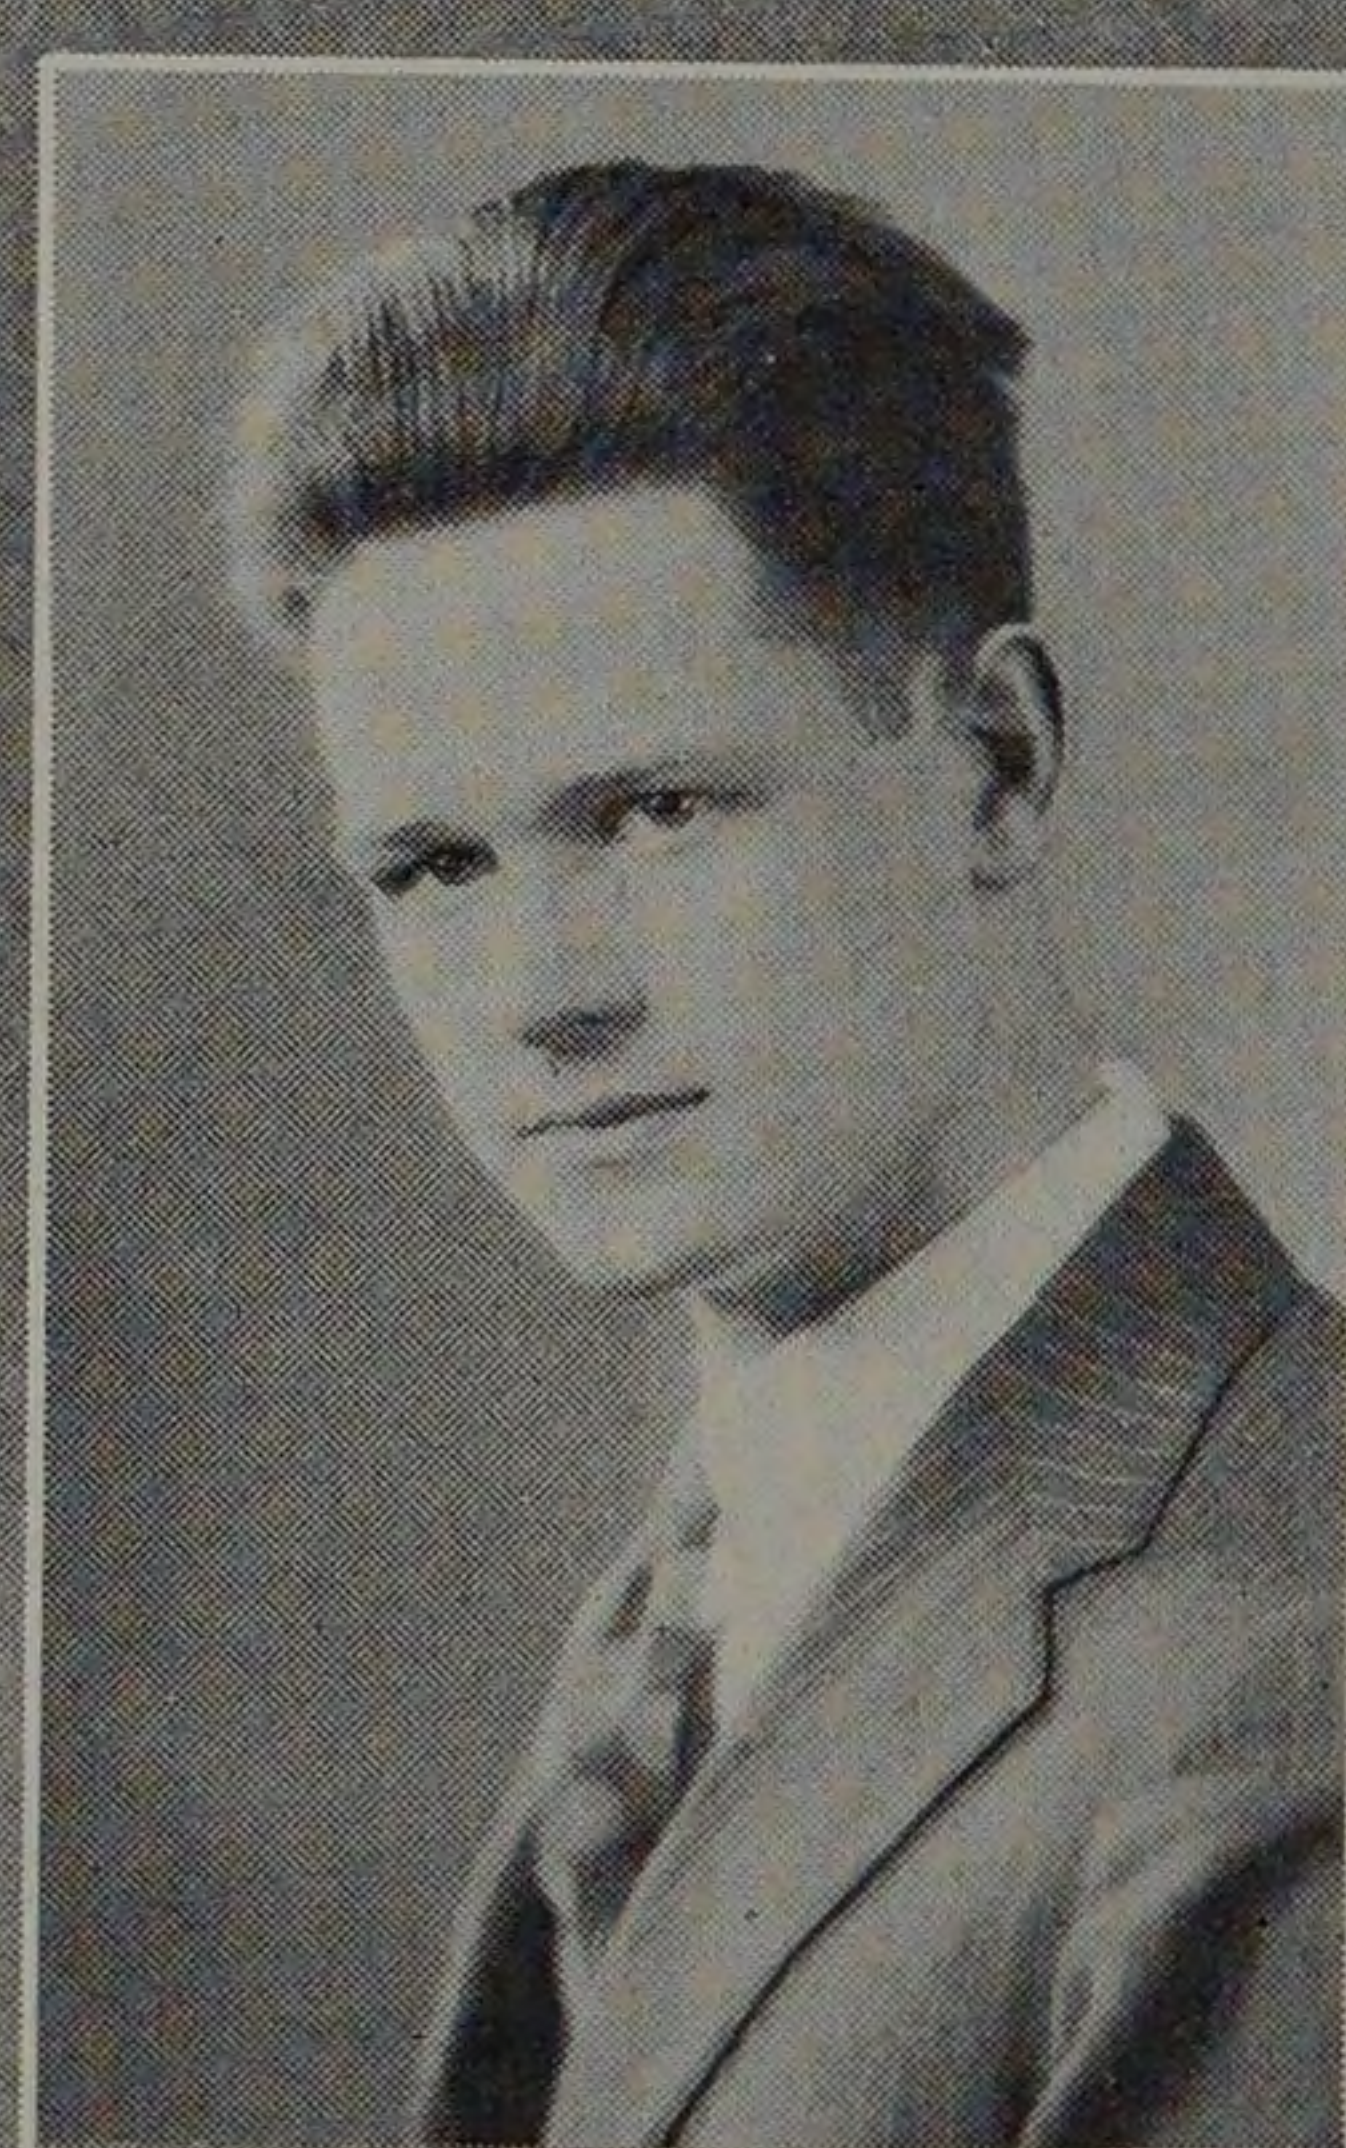

To Dean Monin we must extend our heart-felt gratitude for the sympathetic interest, and sincere aid he has given us at all times.
