

Foreword

IT has been our purpose in the building of the 1926 CYCLE to carry the spirit of engineering through all of its pages, and to link the name of The Armour Institute of Technology with that of the Engineering Profession. We hope that this volume may be a tribute to our Alma Mater and to those of her alumni who have carried the name of their school to its present position. Although our work has been of a serious nature we have not forgotten that life and color must always be associated with a record of college activities. If in years to come the 1926 CYCLE recalls but one pleasant memory of undergraduate days at Armour, then our efforts have not been in vain.
