

Junior Dance

Social Committee

L. O. Castle, Chairman

K. Crane

M. B. Rothrock

W. T. Wilson

G. O. Vandaveer

On the night of December twelfth nineteen hundred and twenty-five, the social chairman, Les Castle, called a most important meeting of the Juniors, inviting also all the other inmates of Armour Tech, and, having assembled a crowd larger than Dean Monin's Economics class, he wound up Van's Society Boys, opened the doors of the Florentine Room at the Congress Hotel and the dance was on.

As the dancing continued, out on the crowded floor several couples could be seen bobbing up and down in the familiar contortions so peculiar to the Charleston.

Despite the lack of a motion for such, the meeting adjourned at twelve-thirty with, "the thinking fellows calling Yellows."

"—and the dance was on."