

A PAGE OF LIVE SPORTING NEWS

NO XMAS PRESENTS FOR THESE ORPHANS

Dizzy Lusion, runnerup to Will E. Hop (the Q expert) for the horseshoe championship at the recent Carnival of Roses tournament held five years ago, has just joined the Cubs. The Sox' chances for the pennant are thus increased by at least 53.749%. Lusion is a great fielder, in fact, he's a regular human spider when it comes to catching flies. He bats around 50-50—fifty times up, fifty strike outs, and has a hard time finding first base. He is a mason, having recently laid his 32nd brick.

SOCKLESS HOSE

Hosiery salesmen report heavy demand from American League pitchers for new runless stockings.

CUTTING REBUKE

Upsala—During an operation here today, one of the surgeons sang "Everybody Has Someone; All I Have Is You." (Ed. Note: Our Swedish correspondent warned us that this is nothing to write home about; if the patient sang "When I Am with You, I Am All Alone," then it would be news.)

WE TOO EXPECT TO FINISH OUR LIFE AS NIGHT WATCHMAN

Logone Baseten, of the class of '76, a mechanical engineer formerly with the Bureau of Standards at their Burnside shops, is now in charge of the cement used in the Roosevelt Dam, near Crawford Avenue.

INTERNATIONAL POLO GAMES

Attract Large Crowds Daily

Lovers of clean sport will appreciate this picture, transmitted by the new Telecrax process (devised by Prof. R. O.

T. C. Halldone, formerly of Oxford and now of Shoe University—a little higher than Oxford), from the Azores Islands, where the International Ping Pong matches are being carried out on stretchers. This picture gives the reason why. Stanislov is the one with the boil on the back of his neck. Contoslovak Stanislovos is his dancing partner. The snarls of the contestants and the sound of crunching bones filled the immense amphitheater as they chewed off ears and toes. Shortly after this heartrending scenes was taken, brave ladies broke down into tears, and strong men bit their gums to the bridgework.

CLEVER CHIRPS OF THE CHILDREN

(The editor will pay 10 dollars by check, twenty (20) cents cash, for all contributions that fail to reach him.)

Little Clausius-Clapeyron aged  $2\frac{1}{2}$ , the infant prodigy who was blamed for the Shenandoah disaster three years ago, was walking through the Art Institute with his papa (e.g. the old man) and they sighted a picture of St. Francis with a halo about his head. "Oh papa," said little Hanz, "he's carrying a spare tire too."

TWO KILLED, ONE OF THEM SERIOUSLY

Chicago, Ill.—Noel P. Anthrax is resting easy after a fall down the elevator shaft in the Wrigley Building. The funeral was the day before yesterday.

It is also said that his wife, a decided blond, morning after (or was it over?) his death, took peroxide, and dyed. Walla Walla papers please do not copy, this is copyrighted.

AN EMBARRASSING
DEVELOPMENT

Denver—Nick L. Chrome, the famous photographer, had a serious accident the other day while attempting to scale a Pike's peak. He was in the act of getting a close-up of a bird's nest—one of those pictures that go good in a Sunday Rotogravure section—when his suspenders broke. The result, of course, was an under exposure.

FLEES IN PAPA'S PANTS

St. Paul, June 1, 1927—Several diamond breeches, belonging to Ashbaugh McFlea-bite, are missing after a daring attempt to smuggle them into this country from North Dakota in a surveying instrument. Custom House officials believe that they were lost in transit.

Fillmore Bottles, class of '27, world's light-weight champion butcher, tried to collect damages from the expressman for breaking the arms off his statue of Venus de Milo.

SPORT GOSSIP

Dobell Dumbell, captain of Armour Tech's championship football team, won twelfth place on one of the 230 All-American bowling teams. The picture shows the team lined up for signal practice shortly before the Columbia game. Captain Dumbell is the third from the top. He is the one with the garters on.

He was knocked out in the Columbia game, and hasn't regained consciousness since. In an exclusive interview given to The Gab at the hospital, he said: "Lydia B. Pinkham and Bernarr Macfadden are largely responsible for our successful season." The Black and Yellow warriors, it will be remembered, did not lose a game—in fact, they didn't play any.

Two Hundred Forty-eight