

CRANE AT ARMOUR

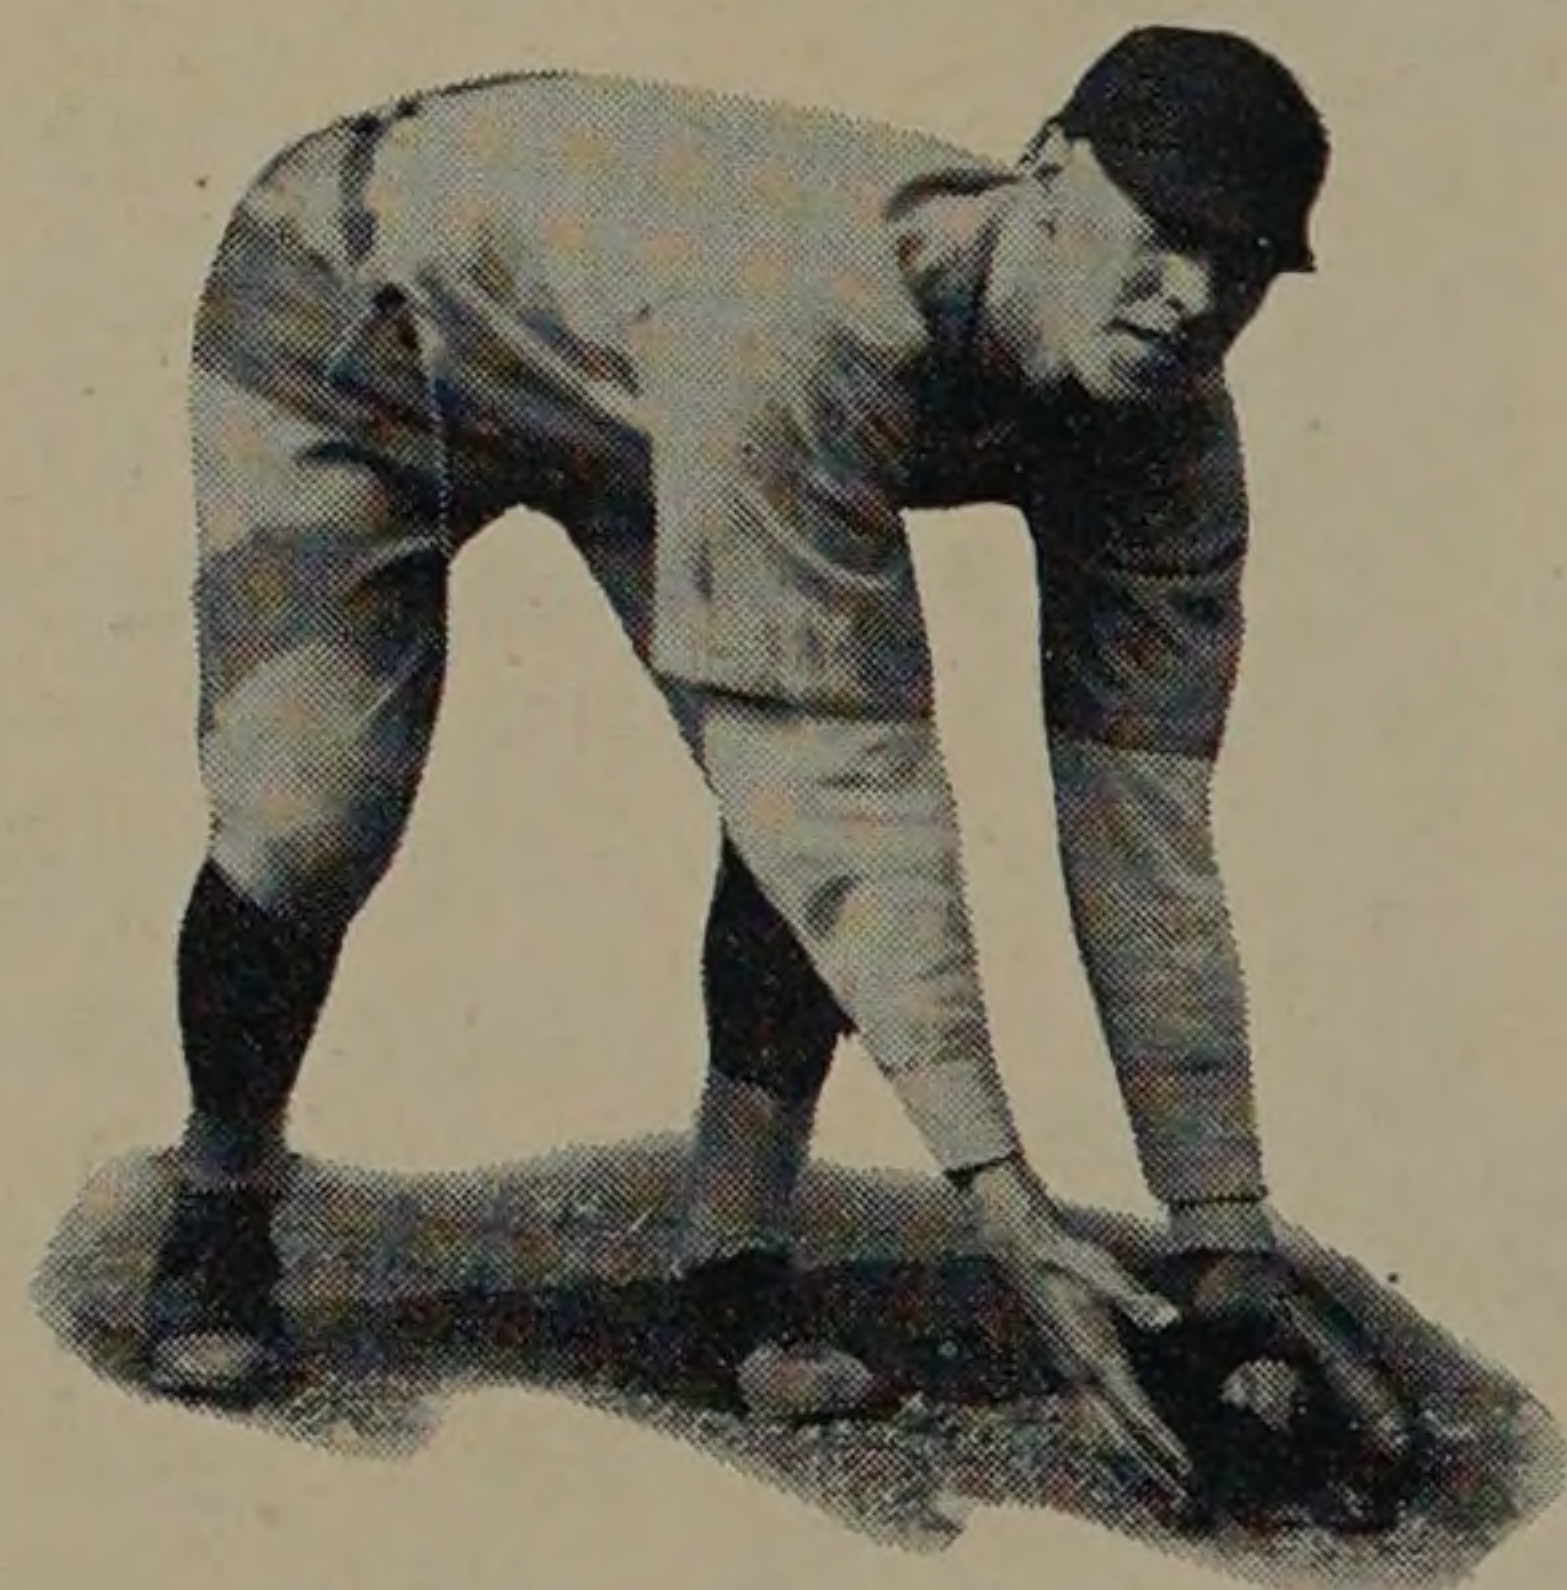

With one of the hardest schedules in years facing them, the baseball team pried off the lid of the 1927 season with Crane College as opponents on April 14th. Prior to this game, the squad had been practicing in the gym due to the unsettled weather, and consequently were not in the best of condition. The day of the game the weather was ideal for so early in the season. Alexander drew the pitching assignment and proved to be in wonderful form. In the first two innings. Crane scored three runs, but Alex soon settled down with the result that Crane was through for the day. Armour knotted the count in the fifth and then won out in the sixth on several timely hits by Edstrand and Jennings. This game started the team off with a world of confidence, as the material was mostly untried.
