

Led by a small group of workers, early in 1874, a Mission school was opened in a vacant store building. This prospered and came to the attention of Joseph Armour who—