ADMINISTRATION

Today is the fruit of yesterday—its richness is most thoroughly enjoyed because of the timely foresight of an administration such as ours.

In no small way is George Sinclair Allison, Secretary and Treasurer, responsible for our continued existence. His keen mind and shrewd decisions are outstanding in their accuracy.

John Cornelius Penn, Dean of Engineering and Professor of Civil Engineering, to whom is entrusted the high standards of a rigorous college training, leaves no doubt in the mind of anyone as to the value of an engineering education.

As Dean of Students and Professor of Mathematics, Claude Irwin Palmer has gained the respect and confidence of all with whom he has come into contact. His cheerful, helpful attitude in adjusting student difficulties has done much to establish the warm feeling of friendship between the students at the Institute.

Robert Vallette Perry, Director of Evening Classes and Professor of Machine Design, claims the privilege of pointing with pride to the evening classes for their steady, efficient progress.
