

« « CYCLE « « 1930

The only defeat on the schedule came when Luther trimmed the engineers 7-1 at Decorah, Iowa. For this game the team went into the proverbial slump and played a game that would have done credit to a bunch of slow motion artists. Simpson pitched with a dead arm and was nicked for twelve hits.

The next day at Watertown the bunch suddenly snapped out of it, played bang up baseball, and clouted the apple to all corners of the orchard. Northwestern was the victim and meekly took a twenty-three to two trimming.

In the final game of the season it was only necessary to go through a few motions to trim "Y" College 7-1.

So ends the story of the most successful season in Armour's baseball history. Have we got some baseball tossers? Well, I guess!!

MAGO

ANDERSON