

P. E. HEATH

THE CYCLE

The Cycle. A most unusual title, and yet what term could we have chosen to serve our purpose better?

To we who are engineers, it has a significance which may be either captivating and intensely interesting or yet again may be repulsive as it reminds one of the many unsuccessful hours spent in solving its mysteries.

To one who has been a part of the surging school activities it portrays a different picture. Let us say, a picture representing a past period of time in which many events took place, which in the future, will never repeat. A picture in which there have been many subjects.

In offering you this volume it has been our purpose to perpetuate this picture, of past events, with concrete evidence of their happening.

To the engineers it may be pleasing and successful in capturing their approval, or it may be irritating as it reminds them of the unsolved mysteries of the past period from which they have just emerged. In each case the reaction is different and neither the editor nor the staff may say which it will be. The individual's past alone will tell. However, we have endeavored to make the picture pleasing to those who were the subjects, and to make possible a perpetual memento of their college days.

We, who were The Cycle staff, are no more. In our efforts to record events correctly and to pay tribute to those most deserving, we have completed a most enjoyable task. It is with pleasure that we present to you, this volume of happy memories. As you turn through its pages, in the years to come, may you live again those college days—the days of wondrous vigor and untold opportunity.

