The Honor "A" Society was created early in the year of 1914 and is one of the oldest organizations at Armour. Although it was originally organized for the purpose of governing all athletics on the campus, it has been replaced in that capacity by the Armour Tech Athletic Association. At the present time it is maintained strictly as a Society for Tech lettermen and devotes its interests toward the promotion of athletics. The members, who are chosen only from the Junior and Senior classes, wear a small gold "A" charm as a mark of distinction.

During the past year, the Society decreed that Thursday should be official letter day, requesting that all men who have earned the coveted "A" should wear them on that day. It also stated that men having letter-sweaters from other schools may wear the sweaters on removal of the letter.

The seventh annual athletic re-union banquet was held at the Blackhawk Restaurant on Thursday evening, December 8, 1932, immediately after the alumni-varsity basketball game was made history in the proper manner. The banquet was noteworthy because of the conspicuous absence of the after-dinner speakers. In addition to the dinner, the orchestra and splendid floor show furnished everything in the way of amusement for the pick of Armour's athletes and the Institute's coaches.
