

The railroads, which form one of the industry's major means of transportation, come to Chicago from every direction and carry the fruits of her industry to all parts of the world. They employ men from all walks of life. The above view shows the construction of a railroad bridge for the Illinois Central Railroad.