

JUNIOR WEEK, 1933

The outsider who views our student body is provided the opportunity of seeing two distinctly different types of men. The first type exists for thirty-five weeks of the school year, while the second lives during Junior Week only. From May 15th to May 20th, 1933, the order of the day and night was not that of slide-rules and text-books, recitations and examinations, but was rather baseball, track, tennis, interfraternity sports, the Home Concert, Open House Night, Circus Day, and the Junior Formal.

Every possible form of activity was open to those who would seek it or who would step into the whirlpool of hustling and hurrying which characterized the campus during this time. It was no effort at all to be active and to have plenty to do at any time throughout the week.

The baseball game played with Michigan State Normal officially opened the week on Monday afternoon. That night the Institute was thrown open to all who would visit it. All departments were in running order and no effects were missing, inasmuch as the large crowd of two thousand people demanded to see every branch of the school in operation. This part of the program never fails to draw many interested people from all walks of life who come to view the methods employed in the training of technical men.

Bright and early Tuesday morning the freshmen and sophomores staged a hard fought, bitterly contested, much debated soft ball game in Ogden Field. Following this the
