Honor "A," founded in the spring of 1914, was intended to be the governing board of athletics at Armour. With the birth of the Armour Tech Athletic Association in 1922, this original duty of Honor "A" was taken over by the newer body. Since that time Honor "A" has existed as an honorary lettermen's society devoted to the promotion of Armour's success in athletics. The results have been very gratifying, for Tech's teams have reached the point where the Big Ten schools are complaining that our victories are due to the fact that we are using freshmen. Needless to say, if our teams were not successful, other schools would never question our eligibility rules.

This past year has seen many changes at the Institute. Likewise there have been changes in the customs and organization of Honor "A." The tradition of honoring the outstanding leaders in each sport was continued, but the method pursued was different. Working in conjunction with the Athletic Association, an Award Assembly was planned. At this assembly, the men so honored by Honor "A" were presented with their gold "A's," and at the same time the basketball, swimming, and wrestling awards were made before the student body.

In line with its purpose of promoting athletics, members of Honor "A" made pep talks before classes in advance of important basketball games. It was felt that by bringing athletics forcibly to the student's mind the turnout for the various teams would be increased. Though this has been but a humble beginning, the organization feels that it is on the road to increased service and greater usefulness to our alma mater.
