THE SENIOR INFORMAL

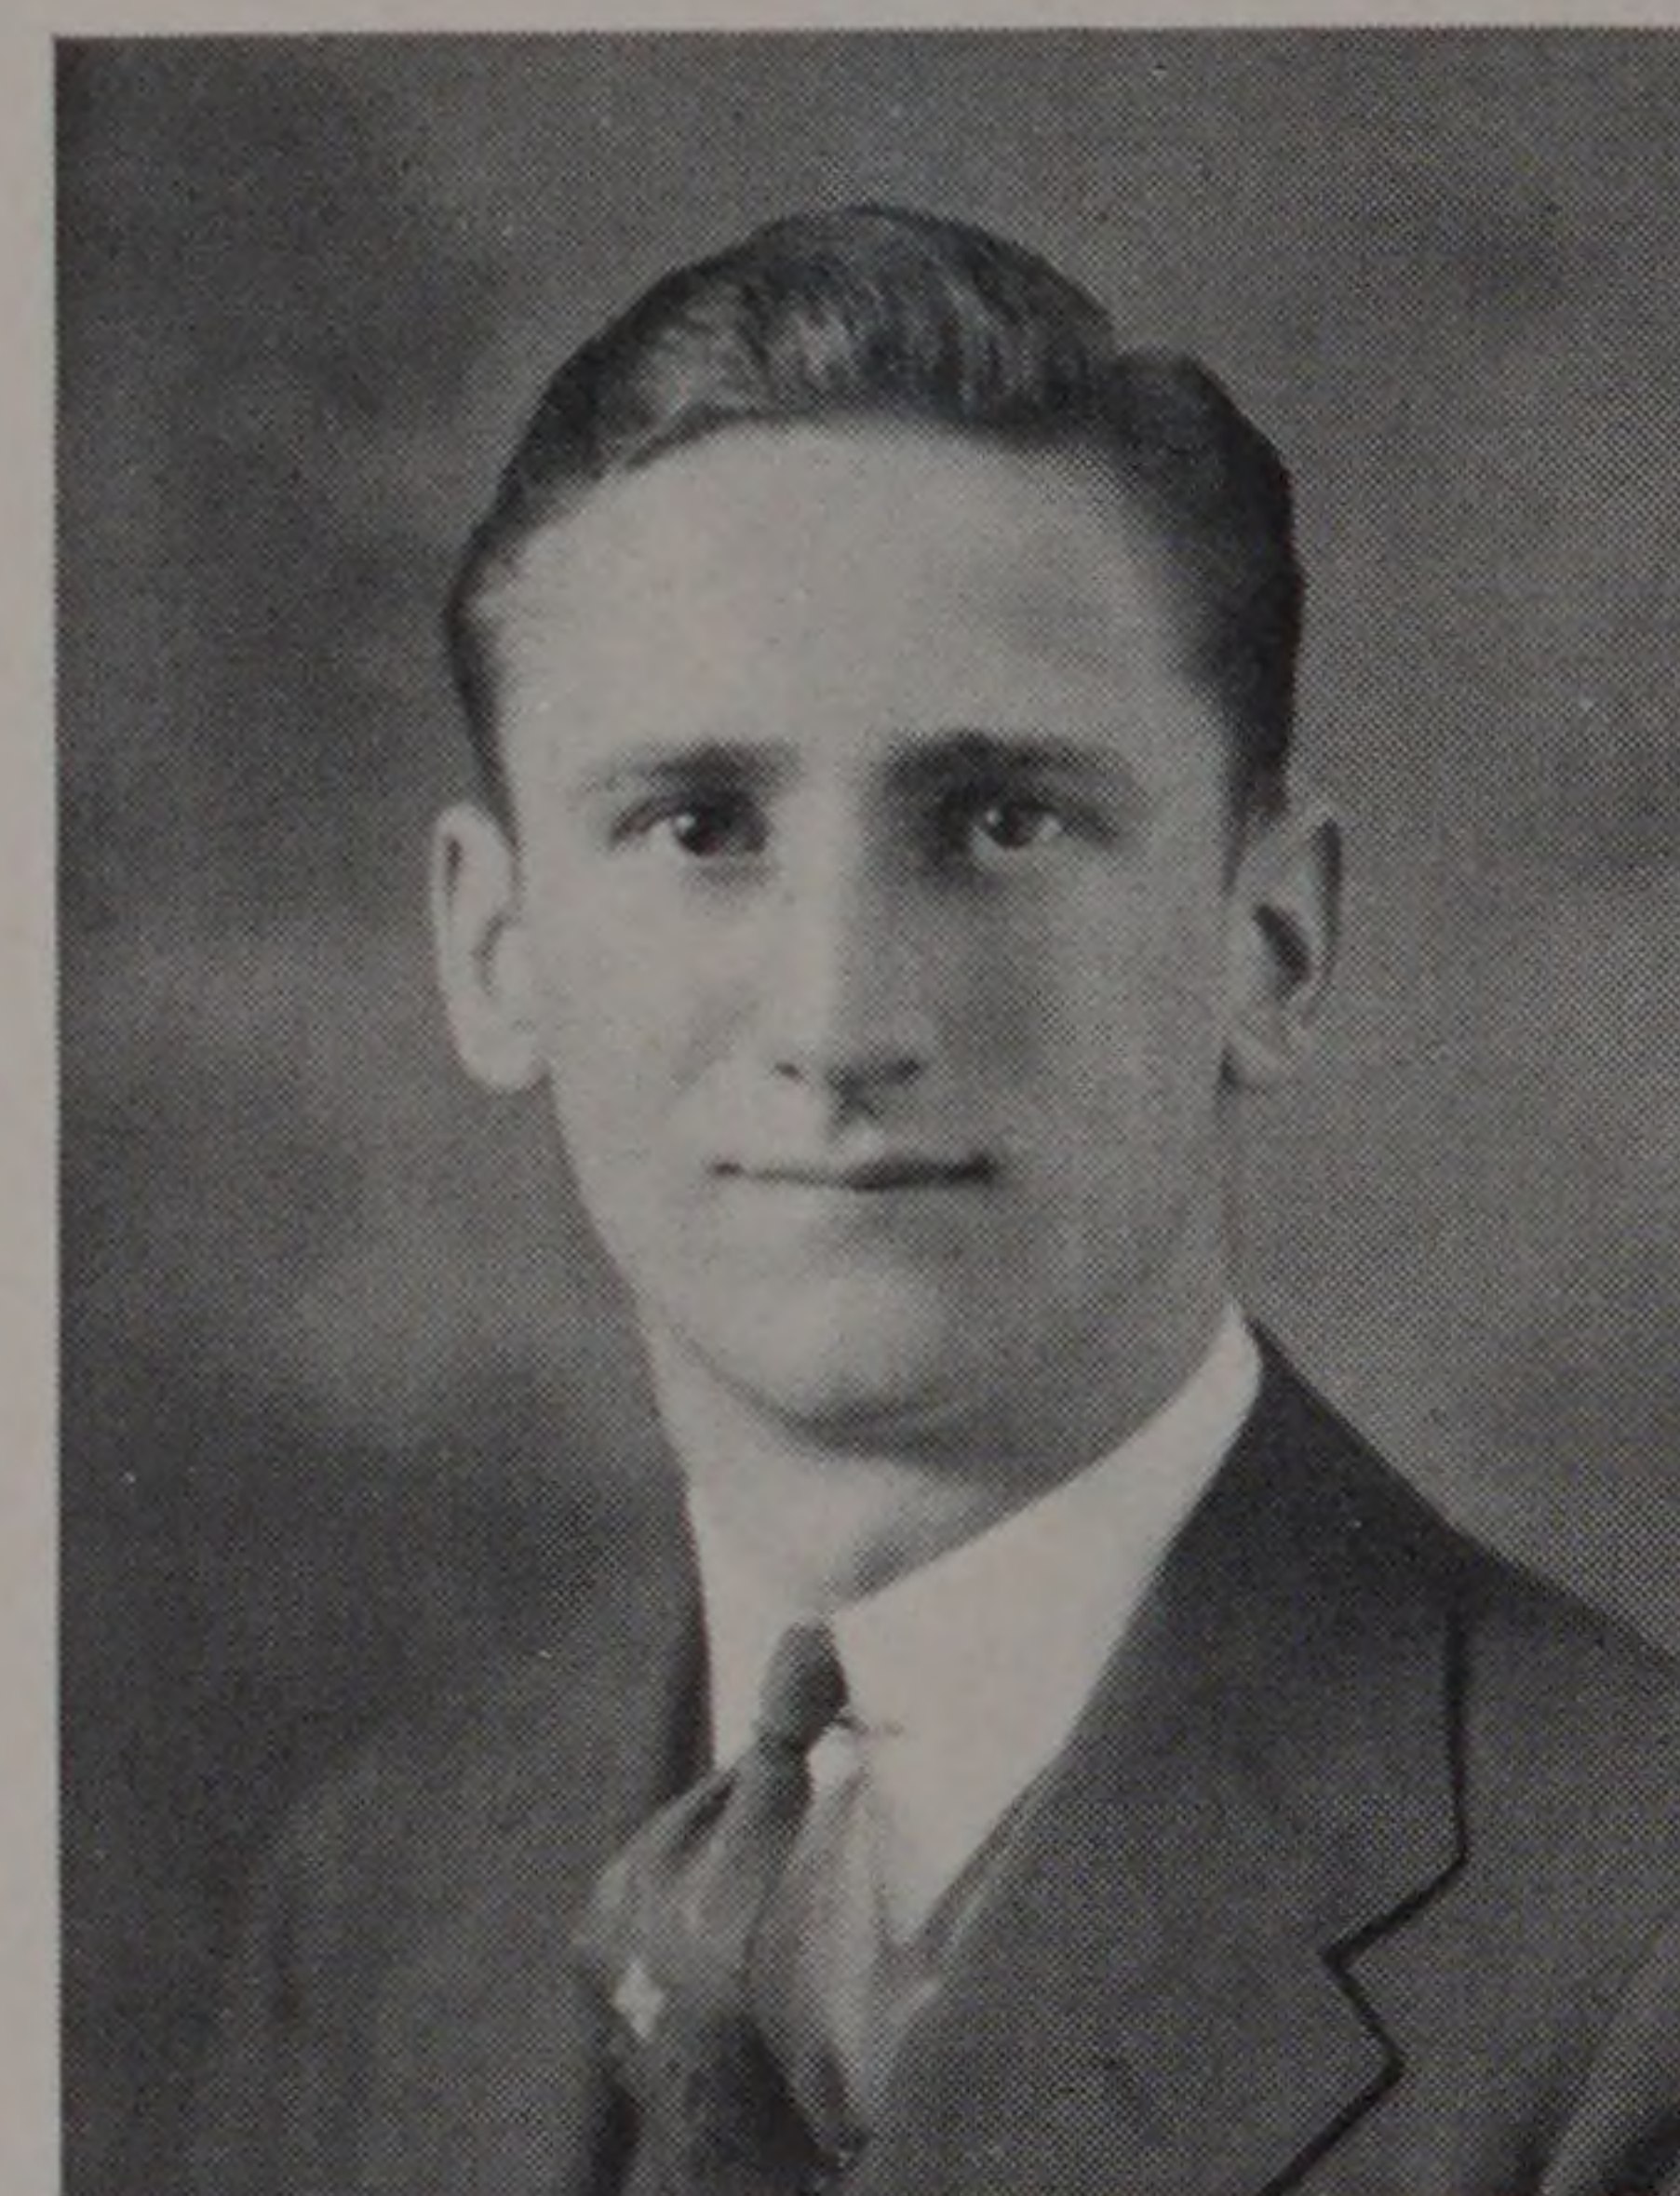

The Grand Ballroom of the Medinah Athletic Club

Armour social season was brilliantly launched by the class of '36 on November 29, 1935, when the Senior Informal, another of their highly successful dances, was presented at the Medinah Athletic Club. In giving the first dance of the year, the Seniors also closed their career in the field of class dances. The event was marked with their characteristic style, in that the bids were sold out several days before the dance. Everyone, it seemed, was desirous of attending the social premiere.

The 29th finally arrived and romance, glamour, and excitement ruled as the engineers, whirling their partners over the smooth floor, relaxed and, for an evening at least, forgot the monotony of studies. Perhaps it was with a tinge of sadness in their hearts that the Seniors remembered that this was their last dance as a class at Armour. The spirit of revelry about them, however, soon dispelled all the gloom. Besides, who could be so downhearted in the company of any of the charming misses present?

Gay incidents constantly recurred in the "Techawk's" memory for a long, long time after the dance was over. The captivating rhythm of Emil Flindt's orchestra was remembered with exhilarating effect; the spacious Grand Ballroom of the Medinah Athletic Club with the comfortable lounges was recalled with a tribute to the far-sightedness of the committee who planned for the large crowd.
