The Armour Tech Student Association was formed in 1923 as the Armour Tech Athletic Association. The name was changed by the new constitution. The primary duty of this organization is to coordinate extra-curricular activities. The cost of this undertaking is financed by a student activity fee. Payment of this fee entitles the student to membership in the Armour Tech Student Association, the right to vote for its officers, and participation in all its activities.

The outstanding event of this year was the adoption of a new constitution. The old constitution of the Armour Tech Student Association was revised and brought up to date. It was submitted to the student body, who adopted it. The text of the new constitution follows closely that of the old, most of the changes being of an accommodating nature, prompted by changes in the Institute which made the old constitution inapplicable. In great part, the work of preparing the revised form of the constitution was done by Donald J. Neal, president of the Armour Tech Student Association. The new form was approved by the Board of Athletic Control.
