While the student body took a vacation between semesters, the Tech splashers engaged in two meets, losing a quadrangular contest, on February 8, at Milwaukee, and a two-way encounter at Wright Junior College on the 10th. The swimmers garnered a third and four fourths in the first meet, while Captain Knaus smashed through for a first in the breast-stroke division against Wright. The four-way meet on the 8th, held at Milwaukee State Teachers' College, was won by the home team with 48 points, second and third places going to Wright and South Side Junior Colleges respectively, while Armour trailed along with a meager eleven points. However, in the meet on the 10th, the Tech tankers were back in form with their customary 25 points. Wright's score, 50, was also consistent, but the meet, though lost, again gave Armour's new members some excellent practice. Winblad and Dodge, freshmen in the free-style division, showed great promise, along with Svagdis, who should soon be breast-stroking the team to a victory with his butterfly stroke.

On February 17, the swimmers almost turned in their first victory of the season, when they met South Side Junior College, but timely work on the part of their opponents resulted in a loss, 42-33. Outstanding was Svagdis, who was first in the 100-yard breast stroke and whose excellent work in the medley almost took that event for Tech. Manke of Armour also turned in a good performance by placing first in the fancy diving event, as did Dodge, who took the 220-yard free style.
