RIFLE CLUB

OFFICERS

Robert Miller	Range Officer

Notwithstanding the fact that the Armour rifle club opened the 1935-36 season with a group composed for the most part of inexperienced underclassmen, the members have practiced diligently to develop their marksmanship. With the return of only two experienced riflemen, aided by promising underclassmen, the club has developed a squad of men holding good records.

In the mid-season the club devoted itself for several days to improving the range and to enlarging, remodeling and improving the Rifle Club adjacent to the range. These improvements were found necessary because of inadequate and improper safety and lighting conditions existing at the club previous to this year.

Under the competent instruction of Henry Staudt the members of the club have been taught the proper care and safe use of equipment. Range Officer R. Z. Miller has succeeded in enforcing rigid rules formulated by the club officers pertaining to the handling of firearms in the presence of other club members.

There has been little difficulty in learning four positions used in most matches; namely, prone, sitting, kneeling, and standing. The few difficulties encountered were, for the most part, overcome by instruction in conjunction with constant practice. The riflemen have found the equipment owned by the club to be extremely accurate and in a good state of repair.

Preceding the Christmas holidays the Rifle Club held a meet in which all members were eligible with the exception of H. Staudt and H. M. McDaniels. Although many men shot excellent targets, Jandasek topped the list of contestants and was presented with a .22 caliber rifle. This match developed spirit and self-confidence in the organization. By virtue of this match the club expects many high scores in coming matches.

The team consists of riflemen: H. Staudt, H. McDaniels, R. Starmann, J. Ratto, V. Jandasek, W. Labes, J. Prochaska, R. Z. Miles, W. Otto and A. Dempsey.

Although only one meet has been held with another school during the first semester, the team shot very well. This match was with the University of Akron. The team showed up well against this organization under State Militarism.

Future matches are to be held with Chicago, Northwestern, De Paul, Purdue, Illinois, St. Johns, Rollo School of Mines, Jefferson City Pistol and Rifle Club and Nebraska University.
