

Top Row: Greenberg, Gardes, Pettes, Strassenburg, Walton, Martin, Franzene, Segner, Massman, Zoellner. Second Row: Naas, Klemchuk, Lesak, Jackel, Hamilton, Persson, Boarini, Kemmett, Hoffman, Hulett, Newmark. Third Row: Prymula, Carlson, Shank, Blastik, Nagel, Hellman, Ettinger, Bosnak, Osiecki, Schorow. Fourth Row: Saigh, Hermanovich, Saccomanno, Plengey, Baumann, Kramer, Jacobsen, Cole, Yursis, Fisher, Myers.

rendezvous of waiting sophomores became a dangerous position when the class of '40 attempted to strike. It was the scene of several mobilizations that were freshman victories.

Gratuitous festivities, the class learned, did not end with the Freshman Handshake. The evening of the Handshake members of the class were presented with a well written handbook that described the social fraternities located at Armour. This pamphlet completely described the origin and purpose, the rushing rules and typical activities of the social fraternities. A foreword written by Dean Heald further added to the merit of the publication, and it encouraged membership in the fraternities as one means of balancing arduous school work with social relaxation. School had been in session for only a few weeks when fraternity men began contacting new students for luncheon and dinner dates and Monte Carlo nights and dances. The rushing period in the middle of a week end required full attention of the freshman class until it was ended. Enjoying a splendid time at the hands of the fraternity men, the freshman marveled at the well arranged meals and programs that were prepared by their fraternity hosts. Freshmen were impartially invited, so that all were feted by the

Top Row: Young, Roehm, Furch, Dryer, Holmboe, Olson, Malmquist, Leskin, Siemen, Kuttner. Second Row: Jackel, Prymula, Greenberg, Covington, Baumann, Sitko, Kiefer, Aberer, Andersen, Janisch, Fiala. Third Row: Super, Rozanski, Hermanovich, Futterer, Barrett-Smith, Frush, Zoellner, Falk, Prow, Cole. Fourth Row: Powers, Pfeffer, Esser, Grosse, Sweeney, Niehays, Shaw, Rusanowski, Kunz, Osiecki.

