exchanging free throws and a basket, the score mounting to a 26 all tie. Baskets by Wagner and Swanson against two for Elmhurst, again tied the score. Schleissinger and Dreisike completed Elmhurst's scoring for the afternoon with two field goals, the visitors in the lead at 35-31. Tech then took hold of the situation and scored the next thirteen points, the whistle ending the scoring spree. Wagner's long shot, Swanson's left underhanded basket and three more buckets, and a free throw by Norkus ended the first really spirited Techhawk game in some time.

For the first time in four years Michigan Normal came out on top against Armour, defeating the Techawks 38-29 in the armory gym. Ypsilanti brought along a little fellow named Walsh who packed a wallop that netted almost half of his team's total score. Swanson's ability on long shots again made him high scorer for Armour, with a total of nine points, while Norkus and O'Brien followed with eight and seven respectively. Except for an occasional spurt here and there the game was rather dispirited. Armour displayed little of the fight that was much in evidence against Elmhurst earlier in the week. A you-make-a-basket-and-then-let-me spirit during the first period accounted for a score of 15 up at the half. It was early in the second period that Normal began to place points between themselves and the Techawks until the difference in the two scores was of sufficient magnitude to allow them to coast in the latter minutes of the game. Normal took the tip-off and worked the ball steadily in until within shooting distance, where Norkus retrieved it on the rebound of a missed long shot. Armour started the scoring when Scherer potted one from the far side line, to be followed by similar type shot by Walsh but from the opposite end of the floor. Norkus made one of two free throws good, followed in quick succession by a basket by Scherer, and two dittos plus a free throw by Walsh. Pivoting from a central position, Norkus put two more away to give a one point lead of 7 to 6 for Armour. The center-jump, a spectacle seldom seen in today's revised game, again went to Normal at the start of the second half. With mechanical precision Walsh put away a long shot to start the scoring. Armour matched Ypsilanti point for point in the earlier part of this period, but gradually the visitors put the pressure on and in a short time had a sizeable lead.

With a whole week between semesters to while away the Techawks took a loop up into Michigan to play two games. One, a return game with the Ypsilanti five, and the other an annual game with Detroit Tech. Michigan Normal came out on top in the first game, beating the Techawks 37-25, for their second victory against Armour in the season. Led by their high scorer and captain Paul Wenger, the Hurons employed a swift passing attack that produced results at the expense of the Techawks. Captain O'Brien starred for Armour with five field goals followed by Swanson who sank four buckets. Playing perhaps their best game of the season, the Techawks defeated the Detroit Tech five in the last minute of play, 43-42. Again O'Brien starred for Armour, scoring the winning point on a free throw and piling up a high score of 22 points. The game was one of the season's best, ending in a melee, there being thirty-one personal fouls called throughout the game. The first half opened with both teams working the ball in slowly, matching shot for shot. Stempin broke the ice by dropping in a pot shot which was immediately matched by a long shot by Swanson. Detroit took an early lead on two baskets by Zebroski and Qualman and three free throws awarded by fouls. Trailing by seven points, O'Brien
