For a good many years, the members of the faculty have been united in the Faculty Club. Located in the southwest corner of the Union building, the club provides a place for Armour's professors to relax in their spare moments. Open periods, lunch hours and afternoons find the club well filled with men, enjoying a friendly game of bridge or billiards, reading their favorite magazines, or just talking things over.

When the Union was being remodeled the faculty club did its part by purchasing the pine boards with which to finish off the walls of the new faculty grill. This attractive room provides the ideal place to entertain men who come as visitors to Armour. The club itself is walled with oak planks, giving it a distinguished appearance akin to that of an old English meeting place, but lending, at the same time, the intellectual touch.
