
lectures and labs . . . quizzes and reports . . . slide rules and tables . . . study, study, study . . . but our cycle is more than this, more than grind. The purpose of this year's CYCLE is to reflect in pictures here and there that side of our life beyond the classroom and the laboratory. The dances, where our girls made gentlemen of us all; our sports, where win or lose it was a lot of fun; our bull sessions, where horseplay mixed with serious thought; concerts and trips, assemblies, fraternities and clubs . . . this too has been our college. We have made an effort in these pages to record those experiences so common to us all. Experiences that too soon will be memories that may, however, be relived upon browsing through these pages when the present is a called and even yesteryear. Then the days spent at Armour will be rekindled and the years of college life will live again. This is the purpose of our CYCLE; one, it is hoped, has been achieved.
