

WESTERN SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS

Reorganized both in purpose and scope, the Western Society of Engineers now stands a finished product, a functioning universal engineering society and a tribute to the spirit of co-operation existing between the various departmental societies.

The reorganization was started in 1935, but the final steps toward completion of the present society were taken largely within the past year. Under the present plan, the governing body consists of two representatives elected from each of the engineering societies. These ten men in turn elect their own officers to carry out the program of the society.

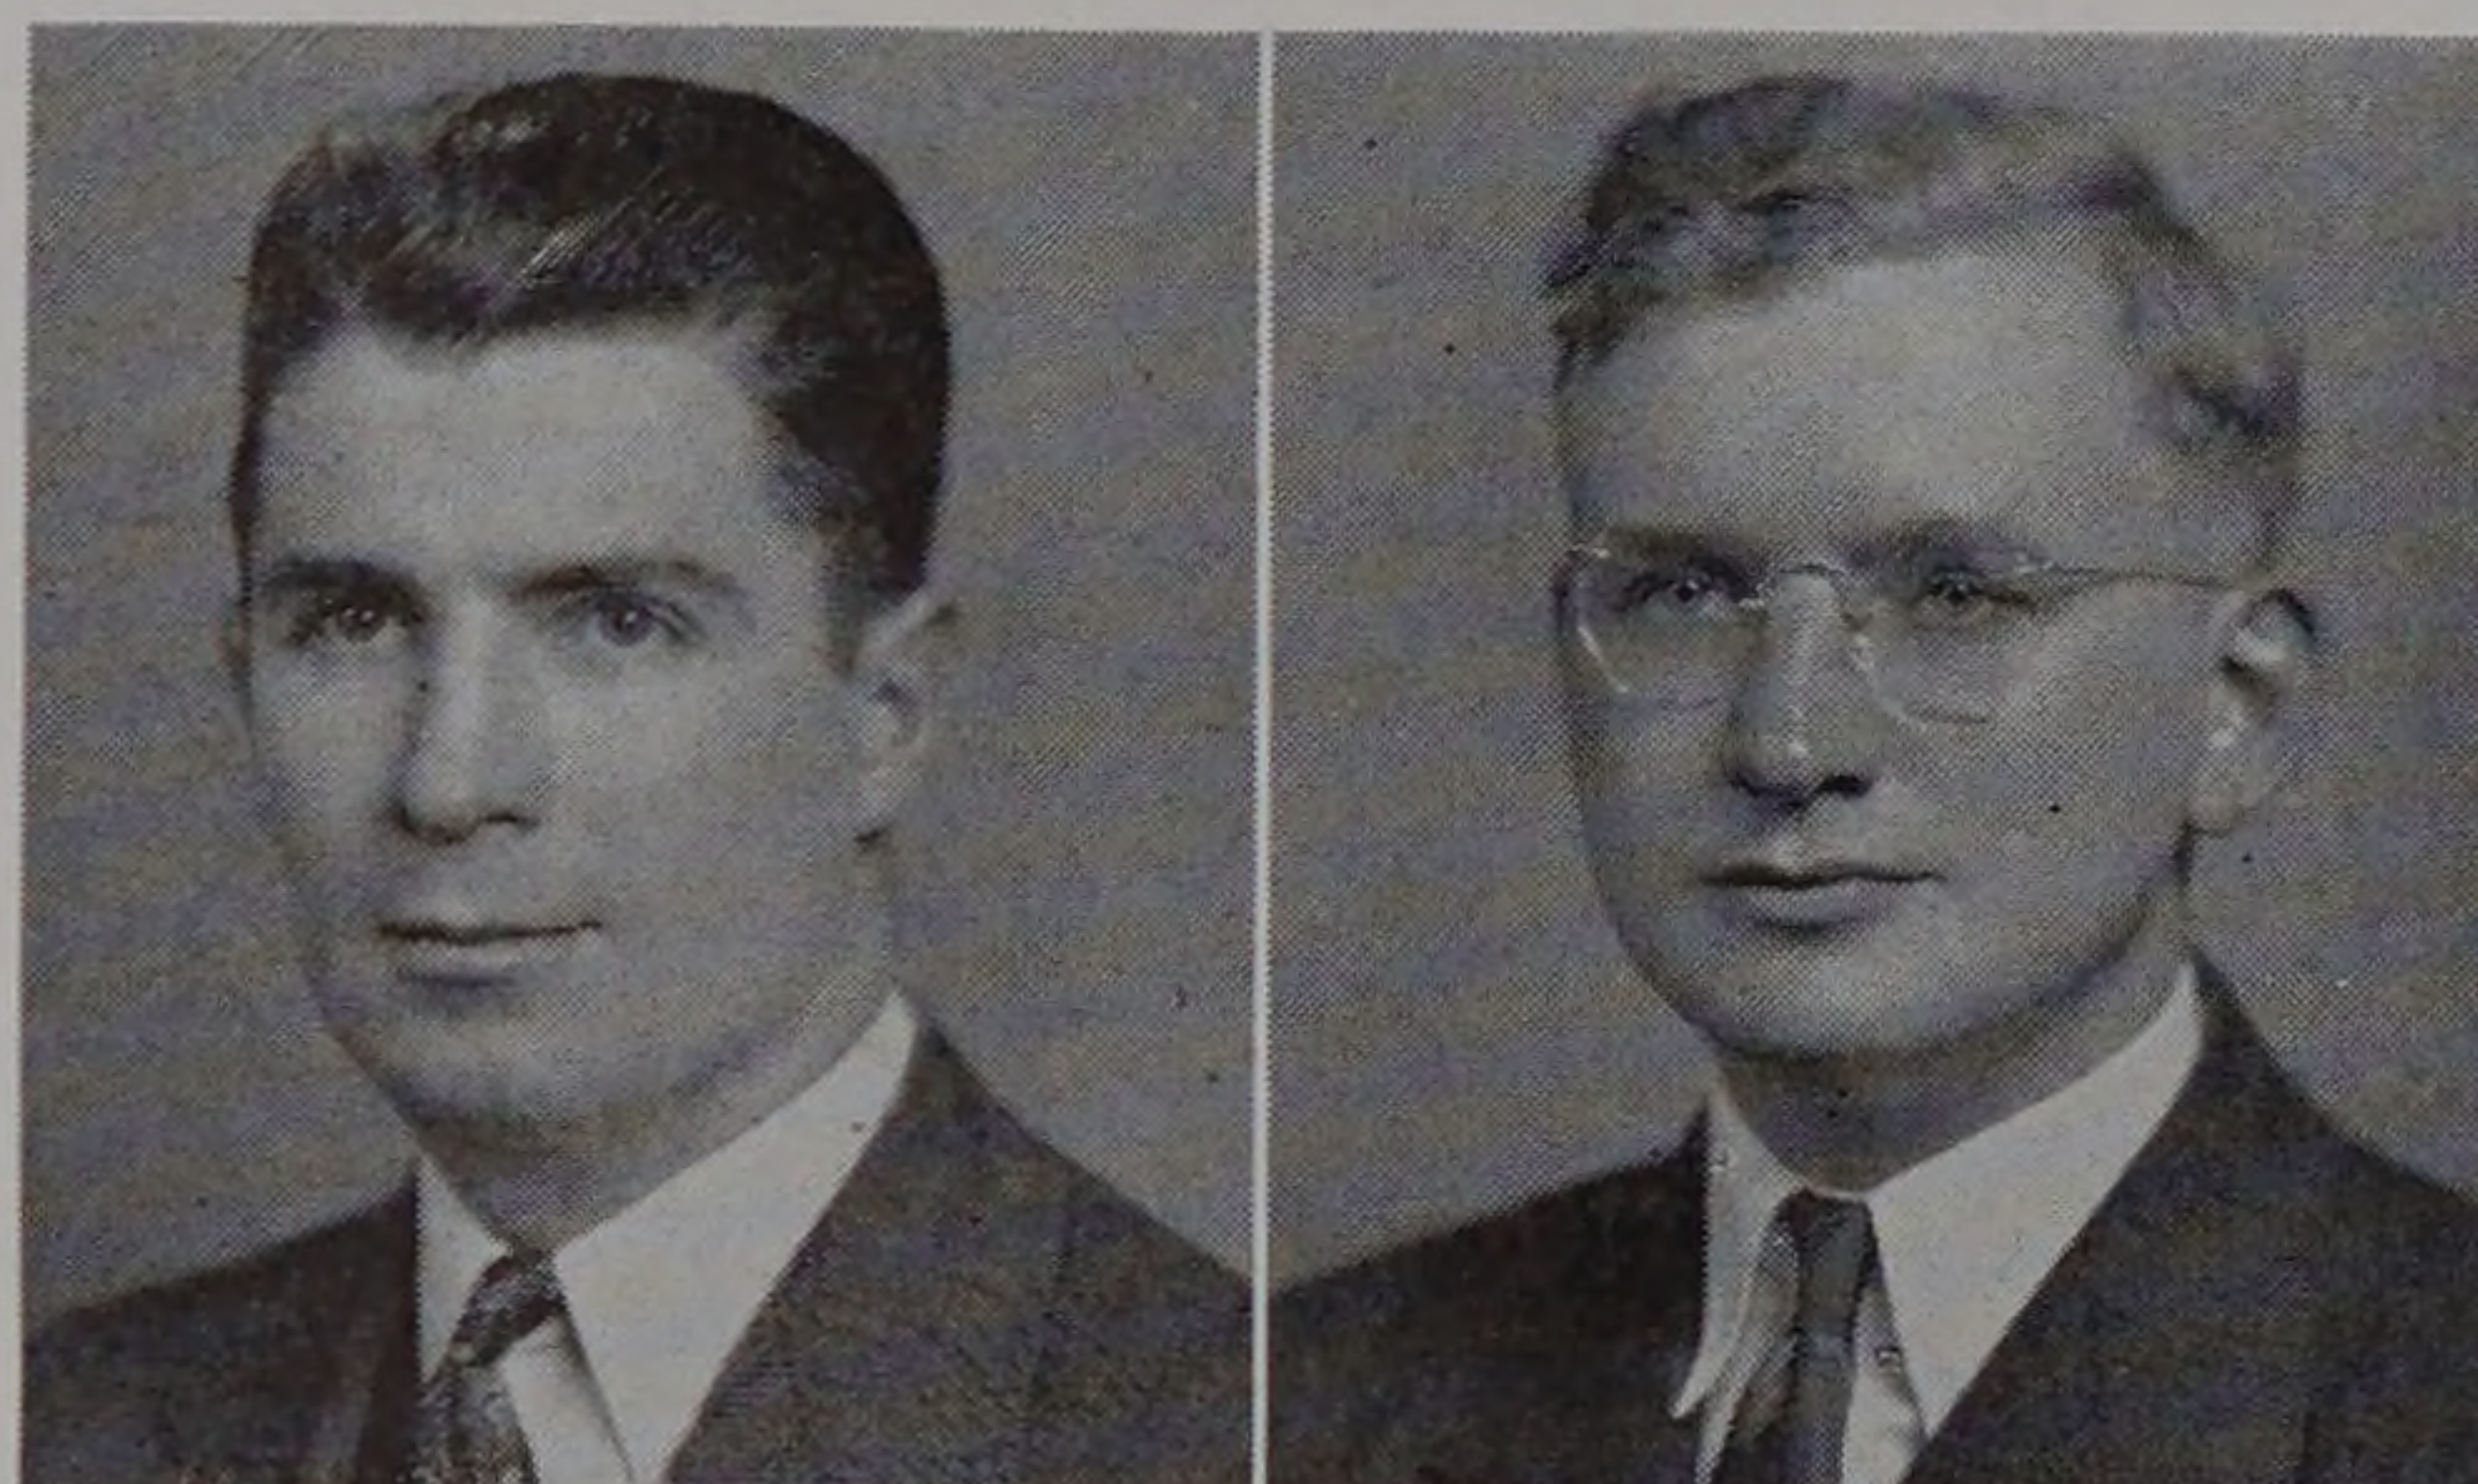

Best known of the society's activities are the general assemblies and the notable guest speakers which it has secured. During the last year such eminent figures as the Abbe Dimnet, noted French author and philosopher, and Carl Van Doren, famous biographer, have appeared on its programs.

In general, the Western Society of Engineers concerns itself with matters in which each of the departments has an interest, but which may be better pursued by the united effort provided by the organization.
