The newest honorary fraternity at Armour, Gamma Theta, accords recognition to those prominent in the field of dramatics. The events culminating in the organization of the fraternity may be traced back as far as October of 1931 when a dramatics group was founded. Since its inception, the group so grew and improved that in 1935 it was decided to establish a more formal organization, an honorary club, to be known as the Armour Player's Guild. It became the function of this body to select, supervise, and sponsor the work of the Players.

In 1939, in order that certain weaknesses of the Guild might be eliminated, Gamma Theta was established as an honorary fraternity and was recognized as such by the Institute officials. Requirements for entrance into the fraternity were made rigorous in an attempt to maintain the standards of Armour's dramatic achievements at a high level.
