The evening of March 18 was truly a night for champions at the twelfth running of the Armour Tech Relay games at the University of Chicago Field House. An overflow audience saw three records smashed and a fourth tied as six hundred athletes from thirty-two colleges and eight universities competed for Armour medals and trophies.

Hardly had the evening's activities begun when Michigan Normal's crack relay team won the college two mile relay in the meet record breaking time of 8:05.3. All attention was next focused on the university 70 yard dash, where Gene Littler of the University of Nebraska equaled the meet record of 7.1 seconds.

The university two mile relay was won by Marquette in 7:52.4, clipping eight-tenths of a second off of the old record set by Michigan State in 1933. To complete the record breaking for the evening, Chuck Fenske added another record to his fast growing collection when he broke all existing marks in a featured three-quarter mile race. The famous middle distance runner trimmed 3.7 seconds off of the world's indoor mark of 3:03.4 established by Lloyd Hahn in 1925.

Team honors went to Michigan State Normal who paced the college division with 62½ points to retain the college trophy for the second time in two years. Kansas State Teachers and Loyola of Chicago took second and third place honors, respectively. Although there were no trophies awarded for team performance in the university division, Marquette was high scorer with Illinois and Wisconsin close behind.
